Immediate Ban On Building, Rezoning In Corte Madera

Applause Greets Council 4-Mo. Moratorium Ruling

By PAT PERRY

The Corte Madera Town Council last night slapped a four-month moratorium on all building and rezoning of residential property of more than one acre or five lots, adopting an emergency ordinance that took effect immediately. (Another Corte Madera Town Council story, page 12.)

The moratorium will halt all new development in the town — except those currently approved, such as the proposed Ernest Hahn regional shopping center and the controversial Meadowsweet Station multi-unit project.

The audience applauded and cheered the drafting of the emergency ordinance but, after the council meeting, a spokesman for the movement to recall Mayor Holmes S. (Pete) Norville termed the council's action "a total about-face."

"It would never have happened if it hadn't been for the recall movement," said William Gordon. "They had over 1,000 signatures on a petition opposing Meadowsweet and the mayor refused to do anything about it."

The decision to put a moratorium on new development came in a highly emotional meeting at which practically everyone in the audience of more than 40 persons got up to give his pitch.

It was prompted by a request from Lois Miner, a housewife of 41 Paloma Drive, Corte Madera. In a one-woman campaign she had previously got herself listed on the agenda to speak, then rose and asked point blank for a building ban on all but R-1 residential building for one year.

"Let the townspeople see what the general plan has in store for us so we don't get smothered by developers and real estate sharpies," she said. "I'm asking for time, the town is in turmoil."

Councilman Harold B. Wagstaff, noting that San Rafael had effectively set a moratorium recently by drafting an ordinance to prevent possible conflict with a general plan, said Corte Madera's board of design review had lately been "inundated with critical projects, including application for two new multi-unit apartment projects and a private school."

Gary G. Grant from the audience said: "There is uneasiness in the minds of most people as to what Corte Madera wants to be — single-residence or commercial — until you settle that you're going to get it thrown up at every meeting. We don't know what the heck kind of philosophy these guys are operating on."

William B. Gilbert, chairman of the town board of design review, drew loud applause when he said from the audience: "All building should be stopped until we have a chance to look around." He called the recent flood of new applications to his board "a last frantic attempt because it was impossible to build in San Rafael."

Mrs. Richard Shargel said: "Most of the townspeople are really panicky that in two or three months or a year something is going to happen to make Corte Madera different than what it was when we came here."

C. William Thomas, chairman of the Corte Madera Planning Commission, spoke from the audience and said he didn't think a moratorium was necessary.

He said there were enough teeth in existing zoning ordinances so that if the commission was not satisfied with a project proposed, commissioners could veto it. He was concerned that if a moratorium was made they would be "deluged with last-minute applications."

Councilmen immediately asked the town attorney, John W. Rosenberg, if it were possible to make an emergency ordinance effective immediately. He said if it was for the health, safety and welfare of the citizens, and the town intended to revise its general plan, a ban could be made for a period of four months —which could twice be extended, making a maximum of one year.

Councilman Robert Flahive proposed: "To protect the health and welfare of the citizens of Corte Madera we adopt an emergency ordinance for a temporary moratorium on building and rezoning in Corte Madera on all residential building in excess of one acre or five lots until the general plan is updated." The council adopted it unanimously.

Norville said its effect would be immediate. It could not, however, affect projects already under way. These included the Hahn shopping center and the four phases of Madera Del Presidio (Meadowsweet Station). Other proposed projects for which applications had already been made included 73 additional units to the Uplands apartments on Paradise Drive, but since this zoning was originally made in 1963 its approval might be open to question.

Rosenberg was instructed to draft the emergency ordinance in final form and present it at today's adjourned meeting of the council at 7:30 p.m. in council chambers.

BLASTS COUNCILMAN

Sausalito Fire Chief Quits

By PAT ANGLE

With a stinging blast at one city councilman, Sausalito's new fire chief last night resigned from the post he has held for just two months.

Chief Robert L. Halon's surprise nnouncement came in a passionate statement presented to the city council whose members expressed shock and dismay at his decision. (Other Sausalito City Council forpage 5.)

The 39-year-old chief said he was leaving because of what he termed "an assassination of the reputations and honor" of the city's department heads by Councilman Evert L. Heynneman.

On June 20, as the city's $1.8 million 1972-73 budget was up for adoption, Heynneman accused the department bhiefs of padding department budgets. At the same time the councilman proposed the budget not be adopted until each department head had cut his spending program by 5 per cent or presented proof to the council as to why he coud not do so.

(At a subsequent meeting the council approved the budget and asked the city administrators to make the 5 per cent cuts, if at all possible.)

Halon is the second department head to resign as the result of Heynneman's allegations. Planning Director H. Eric Borgwardt offered his resignation at the council session where the charges of padding were made, but later decided to remain with the city.

Halon said he had no quarrel with Heynneman's intent to "effect good government and administrative effectiveness in Sausalito. In fact, I support certain aspects of his program with enthusiasm," he commented.

But the chief added: "What I do quarrel with, and vigorously, is his underhanded, slippery, political grandstanding which had the effect of a public humiliation for some who had no

EOC Endorses Head Start Spending

By ERIK M. INGRAM

The Marin County Economic Opportunity Council last night endorsed a $175,000 spending program for Marin Head Start amid charges and denials that the council is using the preschool program as a crutch for its own existence.

The EOC, already stripped of county funding and consequently uncertain of federal funding, suffered another setback yesterday when a superior court decision shot down its food stamp franchise.

The decision by Judge David Menary Jr. refused EOC a temporary injunction to prevent the county welfare department from revoking the franchise for the food stamp operation which has been cited by federal officials for a $36,777 shortage in revenues.

Approval of the proposed Head Start budget, which was handed to board members last night, came only weeks before a federal application deadline for $146,000 in federal money. The remaining $29,000 would come from local sources.

The budget includes about $120,000 in salaries and fringe benefits for Head Start's 23 employees with the remainder slated for rent, utilities, supplies and other operational expenses.

The preschool program for underprivileged children was placed under the EOC's direct control last month at the urging of the federal Office of Child Development, a branch of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The shift came after a federal report charged Head Start with poor administration and ordered a restructuring of the program which last year was operated by two parents' groups.

Parents, meanwhile, charged last night — as they have in the past —that the program was placed under the EOC as a means of keeping that troubled agency afloat.

"We have been used," said Mercedes Schramm, a new EOC director and also a Head Start parent. She urged the antipoverty agency move swiftly to release the preschool program.

Several other parents, both in the audience and on the board voiced similar opinions, noting that without Head Start, there would be little reason for the EOC to continue to operate.

Their criticism drew fire, however, from board member Thomas Mason who said the Head Start program was placed under EOC control not at the wishes of the EOC but rather the Office of Child Development.

"I don't know where the idea that the EOC is trying to swallow Head Start came from," he said. "I don't remember any action of the EOC other than trying to help Head Start."

Board member Roberta Michels countered, however, that the contention of some EOC directors — primarily chairman Barbara Eaton — that Head Start would be scrapped if not run by the EOC was false.

Mrs. Michels said a check with federal officials showed the "categorically denied" statements that their office demanded the EOC run the preschool program.

Mrs. Eaton, who had indicated such in a letter to board members, shot back that her statement had been confirmed several times by the same federal officials.

EOC executive director Alfred R. Conklin III, sought to reassure worried parents that their program would be returned to their control once it was operating smoothly again.

However, at the urging of parents and several board members, the board agreed to seek clarification from the Office of Child Development

Environmental Novato Flood Project

By FRANK FARRARA

The Novato Flood Control Zone's consultants have recommended a $2.9 million flood control project that would leave creek channels in their natural state.

In accord with the community's wish to preserve its environment, the project would sacrifice a degree of flood protection to keep the creeks natural.

The consultants, Royston, Hanamoto, Beck and Abey, recommended improving the creek channels as the altarnative to tha Army Corps of Engineers proposed project that included concrete channeling of Warner Creek and a part of Novato Creek.

"We strongly feel that this is the only feasible flood control alternative which will retain Novato's environment," the firm said. "Its adoption by the city and county will, however, mean acceptance of the possible flood damage and restriction of development in the basin along with the environmental benefits of the project."

The natural channel project would protect against a 20-year storm and would require a maintenance program estimated at $76,500 annually.

(Calculations on the size of a project are based on the magnitude of the anticipated flooding to be controlled and expressed in terms of how freqently flooding of such magnitude would occur. Thus a 20-year storm would mean flooding such as might occur once in 20 years, or a 100-year, or 200-year storm, producing flooding such as might occur in 100 years or in 200 years.)

The corps plan would cost $10.2 million, including $2.4 million in local funds, and provide protection against a 200-year storm.

In an 88-page report released today, the firm said the natural channel project assumes "certain periodic flood damage," the establishment of a flood relief fund and limited development in the watershed.

The project "proposes to achieve the maximum protection possible without hard edge channelization of any creek, to accept periodic inconvenience (say every 10 to 20 years) and flood caused damage and to be prepared to pay for such damage through the establishment of a citizen-supported flood relief fund," the firm said.

"The point of view of this report is that a community's open space and other natural amenities are irreplaceable assets," the firm said.

The proposed creek improvement program would include channel clearing, establishing minimum flows through bridges and culverts and possibly utiliz-

Settle War Now With U.S., Hanoi Told By Peking, Moscow

LONDON (UPI) —China and Russia independently advised Hanoi to settle with the United States without much further delay, authoritative Communist diplomats said today.

Both Communist allies of Hanoi cautioned separately that in the light of latest developments the fortunes of war may turn against North Vietnam.

The sources reported that both assured the Hanoi regime of continued firm political, moral and military support. But they made it clear at the same time in almost identical terms they cannot risk confrontation with the United States which indirectly limits the scope of their assistance.

They did not ask for specific concessions from Hanoi in the suggested effort for a settlement with the United States.

But they implied the need for some degree of flexibility that would pave the way for an end to the war.

The diplomats said the effect of the two-pronged "intervention" by Peking and Moscow in Hanoi was shattering. Distrust of their allies' designs has now added to the disappointment of the North Vietnamese leaders with the alleged footdragging of both China and Russia in recent months over the conflict.

The political and war councils were said to be hard at work in Hanoi on the scope of future strategy. While Peking's and Moscow's advice was said to have been contemptuously brushed aside, the message itself was, however, considered too serious in its implications for Hanoi to ignore.

Hanoi, according to the informants, has been deeply hit by both China's and Russia's guarded reaction to the American blockade of North Vietnamese ports. The North Vietnamese were said to have seen this as the ultimate confirmation of their growing suspicions of flagging support from their allies.

Soviet and Chinese arms were still being shipped to North Vietnam, the diplomats said, but the blockade has sharply reduced the scope with neither China nor Russia evidently prepared to risk a head on collision with the United States, especially at this stage of their global peace offensive.

China's limited rail supply routes to North Vietnam were said to be used to capacity with virtually no room left for any appreciable increase. Nor is China prepared to let the Russians in to handle their arms supplies to Hanoi.

High Court Rule On McGovern, Daley Delegate Seating Asked

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Supreme Court was asked today to decide whether 153 California delegates committed to George S. McGovern and 59 Illinois delegates headed by Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley should be seated at the Democratic National Convention.

In appealing the California case, the Democratic National Committee said the country had been "thrown into a constitutional crisis" by court interference in the delegate selection process.

"The courts have never intruded in this way into the quarrels of political candidates and now that the Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia has done so," said John Kester, a National Committee lawyer, "we have no recourse but to ask the Supreme Court to restore the judiciary to its proper place in the constitutional scheme of things."

The Supreme Court was in recess and it was not certain whether a special session would be convened as both parties requested.

In the Illinois appeal, attorneys for Daley and the other delegates said the lower court had "totally ignored the Illinois election code and had superimposed on (the) code requirements which disenfranchised the electorate and violate the rights of officeholders."

McGovern won all of California's 271 delegates in the winner-take-all June 5 primary. The Democratic Credentials Committee stripped 153 of them from McGovern on grounds they should have been distributed proportionately among the candidates along the line of the party's reform rules. But the Court of Appeals restored all of them to McGovern Wednesday.

The Credentials Committee also refused to recommend seating Daley's "uncommitted" delegates and the Court of Appeals sustained it.

Lawyers for the delegates pledged to McGovern and the successful anti-Daley Illinois challengers urged the Supreme Court not to hear the appeals.

Joseph L. Rauh Jr., attorney for the McGovern delegates, said it was important for the delegate-selection process to "conform to the dictates of due process, equal protection and the First Amendment," and the appeals court decision was "clearly correct."

However, Hubert H. Humphrey's campaign manager, Jack L. Chestnut, said in Miami Beach that the Supreme Court ought to move in to clarify the delegate controversy. He called the appeals court action a "remarkable intrusion" in Democratic party affairs.

On Wednesday, the Appeals Court first issued a terse announcement just after 11 a.m. EDT saying only that it was remanding the California and Illinois delegates cases to the U.S. District Court for reconsideration. News services reported that action.

It was not until nearly four hours later, when the appeals panel issued opinions in the cases, that it became clear the three judges had voted 2-1 to overturn the Credentials panel and give the full 27-member California delegation to McGovern.

The same was true of the Illinois case, in which the appeals court voted unanimously to uphold the credentials committee and bar seating of Daley and 58 other uncommitted delegates.

It turned out that the cases had been remanded to U.S. District Judge George L. Hart. Jr. —but only for the formality of clearing his docket of the matters.

Moscone 'Morning Sickness' Bill Moves

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A Senate committee today endorsed a bill by Sen. George Moscone, D-San Francisco, to extend unemployment disability compensation to pregnant women suffering morning sickness.

The bill cleared the industrial Relations Committee on a straight party-line vote, 4-2, and went to the Finance Committee. Democrats favored it and Republicans voted "no."

Report On Detergent Testings

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI)— Tests on rabbits have shown strong doses of some nonphosphate detergents can cause irreversible blindness in less than 14 days, a report released Wednesday said.

Results of the tests were outlined by George Kingman, executive officer of the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, which conducted the study at Research Triangle Park.

Kingman said that rabbits' eyes exposed to phosphate detergents became inflamed, but healed after 72 hours without permanent damage.

In 14 of 18 white New Zealand rabbits whose eyes were dabbed with a solution of detergents containing carbonates, blindness occurred, Kingman said. Similar results were noted in animals exposed to detergents containing metasilicate, Kingman said.

Kingman said the carbonates and metasilicate detergents caused chronic opacities, meaning the eyes were so clouded the animals could not see. Some of the rabbits also suffered partial or total destruction of the cornea and some tissue in the eyelids was destroyed.

Kingman said that solutions placed in the eye were strong, similar to "what a child would get if he accidentally spilled some in his eye." He said the test did not include washing the eyes after exposure, a precaution most humans could be expected to take.

The detergents used in the experiment were purchesed locally. The brands containing carbonates and used in the study were Sears and Arm and Hammer laundry detergents. Those containing metasilicate were the laundry detergents Ecolo-G and a dishwasing compound, Electro-Sol.

Phosphate detergents used in the study were the laundry products Tide, Ajax and Dash, the soap power Ivory Snow, and the dishwashing liquid Cascade.

Kingman said earlier tests by other agencies had been made, as required by the Food and Drug Administration, but that the earlier tests had covered only a 72-hour time span.

Agents Rush Jet, Killing Hijackers; Traveler Dies

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Two foreign-born hijackers and a passenger died in a shootout yesterday when FBI agents rushed a jetliner on a remote runway of San Francisco International Airport.

FBI agents surrounded the Pacific Southwest Airlines jetliner after the gunmen demanded $800,000, two parachutes and a flight plan to Siberia as ransom for 86 passengers.

FBI agents identified the hijackers as Dmitrov Alexiev, 28, Hayward, an independent cab driver at the San Francisco airport, and Michael D. Azmanoff, also 28, who recently moved to the Bay Area. The FBI said both had come to the United States in the 1950s and 1960s but did not say from where.

They were killed after the Sacramento-San Francisco flight landed, taxied to a remote runway to await the ransom demands and two FBI agents, one posing as a pilot, got aboard.

Azmanoff escorted the agent posing as a pilot to the rear of the plane and a second agent sneaked aboard and headed into the cockpit where he killed Alexiev with two shotgun blasts, the FBI said.

Hearing the shooting, Azmanoff opened up with an automatic pistol, killing E. H. Stanley Carter, 66, Longueuil, Quebec, and wounding two other passengers. One of the wounded was actor Victor Yung, 56, who plays the cook in the television "Bonanza" series.

His gun empty, the hijacker pulled a knife and started toward the front of the plane, but he was met by the FBI agent with the shotgun. The hijacker ducked one blast but another agent, among those who rushed aboard after the first gunshots, approached and shot him four times, twice in the head.

PSA President J. Floyd Andrews said after the shooting that "the deed was a dastardly one and we are very upset that there was a death and injuries to our passengers.

"I think the FBI conducted themselves in the best manner possible and good decisions in deciding to apprehend the hijackers."

Passengers tumbled from emergency exits when the gunfire started, while others dove for cover.

"I instinctively hit the floor," said Maurice Embley, 44, Auburn. "It's not like it is on TV...there's not enough time to be scared."

Yung, who once played the "No. 2" son in the "Charlie Chan" movie series, said he tumbled from his seat when the shooting started.

"Luckily I rolled over—I was hit in the back as the man who was killed stood up," Yung said after surgeons removed a slug from his left side.

The other injured passenger, Leo R. Gormley, Van Nuys, was reported in fair condition with a wound in the lower chest.

The shoot-out at 4 p.m. ended an ordeal that began six hours earlier when flight 710 was hijacked after leaving Sacremento.

When the commandeered plane landed in San Francisco, a PSA spokesman said, "We'll give them anything they want to insure the safety of the passengers and crew."

The $800,000 ransom was delivered from New York in $5, $10 and $20 bills and was carried aboard the 737 jet by the FBI agent posing as a pilot.

During negotiations with PSA, the hijackers refused to allow food brought aboard the grounded plane and one gunman held a pistol to the head of the pilot, Capt. Denny Waller, threatening to kill him if anyone approached.

A Hayward neighbor of Alexiev, Richard Bailey, said the hijacker was "friendly, but not overly so, and he would always exchange the usual morning pleasantries."

Bailey said that six months ago the hijacker wanted his wife to fly to Russia to persuade his mother to come to the United States. He felt he could not go himself, but Bailey was unsure of why Alexiev felt this way.

U.S. Planes Record 340 Strikes Over The North

SAIGON (UPI)—U.S. warplanes in record-matching numbers blasted targets in North Vietnam Wednesday, the U.S. command said today, knocking out a railroad bridge near Hanoi, hitting a MIG airfield and destroying or damaging scores of ground installations.

The command said Air Force, Navy and Marine jet fighterbombers flew 340 strikes over the North in the 24-hour period ending at 5 p.m. Wednesday, tying the record set June 14. The flights were the most since the air war over North Vietnam resumed April 6.

South of Quang Tri City North Vietnamese gunners hit the old imperial capital of Hue, 400 miles north of Saigon, at dawn today in the heaviest shelling of the city in four years. Initial reports said one person, a civilian, was wounded. It was the heaviest enemy bombardment since the 1968 Tet offensive.

A command spokesman said Navy pilots from the aircraft carrier Hancock blasted an open storage area 11 miles north of Haiphong, North Vietnam's major port, setting off "two massive secondary explosions." Other Hancock pilots firing laser-guided "smart" bombs hit a petroleum storage area 15 miles northwest of Haiphong

One Air Force F4 Phantom jet was hit by ground fire in the raids but the pilot jockeyed his plane out to sea where he and his bombardier-navigator ejected and were rescued

NAACP Conclave Cheers Jackson On Revolution

DETROIT (UPI) — "Eight years ago," said the Rev. Jesse C. Jackson, blacks were "picking cotton in Louisiana. Next week we'll be picking a president in Miami."

That, the Rev. Jackson told 2,300 cheering delegates to the 63rd annual NAACP convention Wednesday night, was the definition of revolution — change within a short time.

Before the Rev. Jackson, head of Operation PUSH (People United to Save Humanity) in Chicago, spoke, the resolutions committee of the oldest and largest civil rights organization in the nation met behind closed doors to consider a plan to help defeat President Nixon in the election.

Throughout the week-long convention, Nixon's strong antibusing stand has come under almost constant attack. The only resolution passed by the delegates so far accused Nixon of leading an "assault upon the Fourteenth Amendment's equal protection clause" by suggesting a constitutional ban on busing.

Roy Wilkins, executive director of the NAACP, denied however that there was a "formal organized movement against Nixon's election" at the convention. He noted that the NAACP has only once before abandoned its nonpartisan position—in 1964 when it opposed the election of Republican Barry Goldwater.

Third Human Torch

MOSCOW (UPI) — A third Lithuanian has burned himself to death to protest more than 30 years of Soviet occupation of the western republic, Lithuanian sources said. Police prevented an attempted self-immolation by a fourth man.

Both incidents occurred early last month, shortly after two Lithuanian youths burned themselves to death. Lithuanian sources said those suicides were for "political reasons."

The sources yesterday identified the latest suicide as a 60-year-old laborer.

More Truman Tests

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Former President Harry S. Truman had hoped to be at his home in Independence, Mo., today, but his doctor said more tests in the hospital are needed to pinpoint the cause of his gastrointestinal ailment.

"He is always anxious to leave the hospital," said Research Hospital spokesman John Dreves. He said Truman, 88, wanted to go home yesterday, but Dr. Wallace Graham would not allow it.

Smith Funeral

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Thousands of mourners gathered in historic Temple Square today for the funeral of Joseph Fielding Smith, 10th president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He died Sunday.

The final rites were to be held in the Mormon Tabernacle, with burial to follow in the city cemetery. The body of the 95-year-old leader lay in state in an open metal casket.

Barricade Threat

BELFAST (UPI) — A Protestant threat of more barricades today prompted British authorities to create a public protection agency to combat intimidation against Roman Catholics living in mixed areas.

A government spokesman said the agency would be open around the clock to hear complaints from people fearing sectarian harassment.

Sporadic gunfire broke out several times during the night and early today in West Belfast and army patrols reported two men wounded.

Rain Slide Deaths

TOKYO (UPI) — Heavy rains sweeping over Western Japan since Tuesday triggered new landslides in central Kyushu Island today.

Police said 51 persons in 21 houses were buried in Ebino (city of Miyazaki prefecture state) when the slide hit. Eight persons were rescued and 43 were missing.

Chrysler Asks Hikes

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. has asked the Price Commission for authority to hike prices of 1973 model cars and trucks an average of $180 each.

Roger Hilder, Chrysler comptroller, said yesterday that the initial request for an average boost of about 5 per cent may be followed after July 31 by another request.

Chrysler said $82 of the requested increase was to cover the cost of government-mandated safety and emissions equipment and for new health and safety steps in manufacturing plants.

The mpany also asked for $70 to recover material and labor costs incurred between Jan. 1 and July 31, and $28 to make up for the addition of some options as standard equipment, including disc brakes and electronic ignition.

Youngest Delegate

WATERBURY, Vt. (UPI) — C. Kenneth Dean Jr., 18, has been confirmed as the youngest delegate entitled to participate in the Democratic National Convention.

The Board of Civil Authority, the local election panel, held a special meeting last night and officially registered Dean as a legal voter. He took the Freeman's Oath, which is required under Vermont law.

Dean, who graduated from high school last month, turned 18 Tuesday and the Democratic credentials Committee voted to seat the youth despite the fact that he had not been eligible to vote when he sought the post.

Laird Hits McGovern On Security

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird Thursday accused presidential hopeful George S. McGovern of advocating a "give away now, beg later" national security philosophy that would leave future presidents with only a spasmodic nuclear war policy.

Laird released a 54-page analysis of McGovern's proposal to cut the defense budget by $20 billion to $30 billion by 1975.

Laird also made public a seven-page statement prepared for Congress explaining why he had termed the McGovern's proposal a "white flag surrender budget." The statement was addressed to Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who said Wednesday Laird had broken a promise to Congress by not providing his analysis of the McGovern budget sooner.

Laird said he had planned to hold his document until after the Democratic National Convention because the Democratic Platform Committee had "totally rejected " McGovern's proposals. But said he was releasing them Thursday because of Proxmire's "impatience," and that he was "delighted to keep the issue before the public."

"The view I have is that the so-called white flag budget substitutes a philosophy of give away now, beg later for a philosophy of strengths and willingness to negotiate throughout the world."

The McGovern plan, Laird said, would so weaken the nation's nuclear strength that future Presidents would be left with "no alternative but a spasmodic first strike" capability that would not discriminate between civilian and military targets.

In a cover letter on his lengthy analysis, Laird said he "could not recommend taking such a dangerous and calamitous risk with the safety and security of the American people" as he felt the McGovern proposals contained.

He said that McGovern's proposed research cuts would weaken the U.S. industrial and technological community, and that McGovern's proposals for a 60 per cent cut of U.S. troops in Europe to a total of some 130,000 "would create an unstable military balance" and damage America's relations with her European allies.

Skyjackers Warning Found In Phoenix

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A threatening note scrawled in blood has been found in the home of an airline pilot who helped overpower a hijacker in Saigon, police said.

The hijacker was shot to death by a passenger.

The note, found yesterday in the home of Robert Vaughn, a veteran Pan American World Airways pilot, said, "Pig Eugene Vaughn guilty of murder. To be punished later. Long live Nguyen Thai Binh. Victory to the Vietnamese. Death to the American aggressor."

Vaughn, 53, and two passengers overpowered the young Vietnamese hijacker Sunday, identified as Binh, a University of Washington honor student.

A passenger armed with a revolver shot Binh to death. The man had tried to hijack the Boeing 747 to Hanoi.

The note apparently was written in animal blood.

Vaughn told a news conference the note was "the reaction of sick people." The note was found before he returned home from overseas.

Vaughn suggested that "every pilot in the United States walk off the job and refuse to come back until Congress enacts the death penalty for hijackers."

He also expressed hope that the hijacker's death "might make a lot of people think long and hard about future hijackings."

Isleton Citizens May Go Home Within 90 Days

ISLETON (UPI) —Residents of this flood-damaged delta community may be able to return to their homes in 90 days, a spokesman for the Army Corps of Engineers said today.

The town was inundated June 22 when an emergency levee gave way to floodwaters triggered by the rupture of a main levee on the San Joaquin River.

Water is being pumped out of the small community in the heart of the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta and the Sacramento County Health Department has granted clearances for some businesses to reopen.

There was no indication of Keating's plans for after the campaign and the election.

It was expected that the Indian ambassador's post will be left vacant until after the election.

Speakers Split On Regional Park Idea

By JEFF GREER

Two Marin County officials said today the real issue is not whether a regional parks and open spaces district should be formed, but how it should be governed. A third official and a taxpayers' spokesman condemned the whole idea.

County Administrator John F. Barrows, Parks and Recreation Director Pierre W. Joske, Parks and Recreation Commissioner Polly Smith and Winifred Frederick of the Irate Taxpayers of Marin were panelists on the "Marin Sounding Board" program moderated by Kitty Oppenheimer on Radio KTIM.

A measure for Marin County residents to vote on creation of a countywide regional parks and open space district will be on the November general election ballot.

Mrs. Frederick said Marin County already has 4.5 acres of open space in federal, state and county parks and other public property "for every man, woman and child — off the tax rolls." She said the acreage did not include the planned North Bay waterfront park or the proposed county tennis and swimming pool project.

The wealth of Marin residents is a myth, she said, contrasting the county's $14 million welfare budget. She called for county supervisors "somewhere along the line to call a halt to the unnecessary spending."

Mrs. Frederick also challenged the validity of the so-called Palo Alto report, in which consultants produced figures calling it cheaper for local government to preserve land undeveloped than to provide services for new residential areas, despite any increase in the tax base.

Barrows said he might ask the county supervisors to authorize his staff to prepare its own evaluation of the open space versus development service cost issue.

Barrows repeated his previous warning that as executive officer of the Local Agency Formation Commission, he would oppose creation of a regional park district, at LAFC hearings on the isuue Wednesday. If such a district is formed, he argued, the supervisors should govern it, rather than see creation of "an extra layer of government."

Barrows stressed that the county's 1972-73 budget already contains $700,000 for open space purposes. He said the county could acquire open space without resorting to a special taxing district. "I'm in favor of open space and preserving the ridges" without a new district, Barrows said.

Mrs. Smith said the park district "really isn't controversial" because it is popular. A poll of nearly 10,000 registered voters showed 73 per cent support for the regional plan, and it has been endorsed by seven of Marin's 11 cities and many groups, she said.

Joske also backed the district, favoring the supervisors as its governing board. He denied one caller's assertion that the board was attempting a "power grab" by opposing an autonomous, elected board.

"Open space does not stop at any city boundary," Joske replied to another caller who asked his opinion of San Rafael's opposition to inclusion in the proposed district. "The people of San Rafael or Sausalito will benefit just as much" as other county residents, he added.

The program will be rebroadcast at 10:05 a.m. Sunday.

EOC

whether the preschool program must remain under the EOC.

In other action last night, the EOC board, unaware of its setback in court, agreed unanimously to continue its fight to retain its food stamp program.

The county welfare department last week attempted to withdraw the food stamp franchise after the disclosure of the $36,777 deficit.

Conklin, who is an attorney took the threatened withdrawal to court.

Conklin told the board last night he did not feel the agency was to blame for the discrepancy and added that neither the county, nor the Department of Agriculture which runs the food stamp program, had produced evidence of the deficit.

He charged that the county's claim that an audit revealed the missing funds was false.

A majority of the board backed Conklin's taking the matter to court but several members complained of first learning of the matter in the Independent-Journal.

Conklin said he will appear before the board of supervisors Tuesday seeking its support in halting the welfare department's action.

Killing of the EOC franchise does not materially affect the food stamp program since it is but one of 10 distributors, which receives 90 cents per sale. However, it is the only one open on Saturday. Three banks and a federal credit union share the other distributorships.

If the board of supervisors refuses to overrule its welfare chief, the antipoverty agency will have lost all functions except overseeing the head start preschool program.

The EOC's financial troubles with its food stamp operation came to light this week after federal officials reviewed deposit records with the Federal Reserve Bank.

The review disclosed an unexplained shortage of $36,777 between June 1971 and April of this year.

The shortage is the latest in a series of controversies over the agency's handling of funds. In May, following months of turmoil, the federal government released an audit disclosing the EOC had misused nearly $100,000 last year.

Asst. County Counsel Richard V. Godino said today it is still not known where the food stamp money went or even if the EOC is totally responsible for the shortage.

The board also refused to pay a $175 bill to Western Union for telegrams sent to Bay Area newspapers, radio and television stations in February for a staff press conference in support of former executive director W. Robert Lomax Jr.

The press conference, held in Marin City, was staged by staff members in reaction to an I-J article first disclosing Lomax's lack of accountability for agency funds.

The board last night agreed those staff members responsible for the press conference should pick up the tab for the telegrams.

In a related action, the board refused to pay an additional airline bill of more than $100 charged to the agency by Lomax.

Plans Announced For $60 Million Regional Center

RICHMOND (UPI) —Plans for a $60 million regional shopping center here were announced Wednesday night.

J.E. Burkhardt, general manager of Bayshore Properties, said agreement has been reached for the 125-store center on a 110-acre site on Hilltop Drive between Interstate 80 and San Pablo Avenue.

The shopping center will contain 1.1 million square feet of floor space and parking for 9,000 cars.

First construction phase is expected to begin in about 30 days, Burkhardt told the Richmond City Council.

Developers Want Out On Trails

The Tamalpais Park and Recreation Commission last night heard that Marinview subdivision developers want to abandon portions of their planned public trail system because the terrain is too rugged.

Chairman John McRee said the commission decided to recommend to the Tamalpais Valley Community Services District that it refuse the abandonment unless the developers do work of equal value in the community.

He said the proposed trail system linking homes and roads with Tamalpais Valley School was proving impossible to construct because of steep slopes.

The Red Tide Is Back Again

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The red tide is back — reddish-brown water lapping at the shore and blamed on a microscopic organism called protozoa.

The protozoa is "a very small animal, about 2 microns, which is one-1000th of a millimeter," says Joe Barry, environmental specialist with the San Diego Water Quality Control Board. They live near the water surface, manufacturing oxygen during the day and depleting it by night.

"All we can do is sit and watch it and hope it goes away," Barry said Wednesday.

No hazard to swimmers was reported, but Barry said the phenomena which occurs along Southern California beaches in the summer has killed fish and marine organisms.

CREEK

ing flood control reservoirs, the firm reported.

The improvement program should include repair of creek banks where severe erosion has taken place, the consultants said. This could be accomplished by riprapping "in areas of real need."

Improvements to the creek system "will be short-lived unless a continuing program of creek clearing and maintenance is undertaken, the firm warned.

The City of Novato could halt development in the flood plain or "less drastically" adopt an ordinance limiting development to certain areas or impose strict building regulations to "lessen damage from flooding," the consultants said.

The consultants suggested that a community flood insurance fund could be used to pay for property damages that result from flooding.

For example, the firm said, "a tax rate of $2 per person per year for 50 years would equal $3 million;" about the cost of damages that could result from a 50-year storm.

The consultants estimated the cost of creek improvements at $1,121,800, as follows:

Novato Creek, $123,800; Warner Creek, $165,700; Vineyard Creek, $31,100; Wilson Creek, $66,200; Arroyo Avichi, $55,500; Sutro Creek, $12,000; Simmons Creek, $50,000; and Rush Creek, $617,400.

Other costs including acquisition of land for a pedestrian path system along major creeks, $600,000, drainage easements, $648,000, design, construction, supervision and concrete and soils testing, $168,000, and 15 per cent for contingencies bring the total to $2,919,200, the firm reported.

Corps of Engineers funds wouldn't be available for the natural channel project, but there might be federal funds available for portions of the project, the firm reported.

Another possible project, which wasn't recommended, would be a modified Corps of Engineers project at a local cost of $3,138,000, the firm reported.

This project would be the same as the corps project except covering a 1,000-foot section of Warner Creek at Lu Sutton School, at an additional cost of $550,000 and creating a split concrete channel at the Diablo Triangle at an additional cost of $188,000.

The annual maintenance cost of this project would be $33,000.

The firm rejected as not feasible: having no project at all, creating floodways, having a corps project only east of Highway 101, smaller concrete channels or underground culverts for flood waters.

The firm also recommended an open space system for Novato including pedestrian pathways, open hills, open areas as preserves and greenbelts.

Lewis E. Fredrickson, assistant county flood control engineer, said that a public hearing on the report will be held, but the date hasn't yet been set. Copies will be available for reading at the Novato Branch Library, he said.

The consultants said the next step would be for the community to determine which type of flood control project it wants, and then that project could be "developed in detail and its environmental impact studied."

College Costs Rise Rapidly

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — The life insurance management association says the cost of attending college has outstripped the growing cost of living.

The association said median basic costs are going up at an overall rate of more than 7 per cent a year with the private colleges and universities showing the highest increase, $154.

The figures, compiled from among 1,250 colleges and universities in the nation, showed state students paid $72 more last year at public colleges and out of state students at the same schools paid $141 more.

Robbery Is Charge For Petaluma Man

Christopher Beltramini, 18, of 410 Steward Drive, Petaluma, was arraigned yesterday in Southern Sonoma Municipal Court on a charge of robbery.

Judge Alexander J. McMahon set a preliminary hearing for Monday at 2 p.m. Beltramini was arrested Monday when Petaluma police said he accosted Bruce A. Barber of Petaluma on the Golden Concourse downtown to ask for money. Barber said that when he refused Beltramini, the latter's 17-year-old companion grabbed him and began choking him. The boy was booked into Sonoma Cgunty Juvenile Hall.

Drug Store Plans Are Given Nod

The Mill Valley Architectural Advisory Committee last night approved building plans for the Thrifty Drug Store portion of the Sutter Hill Development Co.'s shopping center complex at East Blithedale and Lomita avenues.

The committee also approved site plans for the store with "some minor landscaping and lighting alterations," according to Janet Mountjoy, committee chairman.

She said that the committee requested samples of the paving material that the firm plans to use for sidewalks on the site.

The company has yet to submit building and site plans for the Alpha Beta Market portion of the complex, she said.

The committee approved remodeling plans for the Mount Carmel Salvage Shop on Lovell and Madrone avenues and requested that the size of a sign at the proposed Texaco gas station at the new Howard Johnson complex off Highway 101 be reduced, she said.

CHIEF

opportunity to defend themselves or answer (the) charges in any sane and appropriate way.

He went on to say that Heynneman had later gone to each department head "after his big show" to apologize for their (the department chiefs') "misunderstanding and misinterpretation" of his good intentions.

Said Halon: "The more he talked to me, the more he seemed convinced that what he did was right, justified, in the best interests of all concerned and had been completely misunderstood by the ones humiliated.

"I will not remain a part of this crap. To me his after-the-fact explanations are simply bullxxxx. To hell with his good intentions."

The chief prefaced his remarks by talking about his love for Sausalito and followed them with a brief farewell to the other councilmen. His voice broke with emotion at one point as he talked about working with individual councilmen.

In closing, Halon called the city's fire service "a tradition-bound, empire building pyramidal construct" and said that before leaving, he would present "a major innovative program" for the Sausalito department.

"Right now the department is bogged down in five and 10-year plans which actually build bigger and better inefficiency plants," he said. "We need more and better fire prevention and building codes, not more and bigger fire suppression shows nor bigger and better fire losses.

Heynneman made no comments after the chief's dissertation, but later told the Independent-Journal the resignation was "a regretable move on Halon's part. God knows, I have high regard for him," the councilman said, but added: "I don't think it was caused by my statements about the 5 per cent, but by his personal ambitions." He refused to amplify his comments.

Councilman Early F. Dunphy seemed to speak for the other councilmen when he said he was "very sad that this has happened. Chief Halon has done a wonderful job in the two months he's been here; it's too bad we can't keep him."

Mayor Robin Sweeny said she had tried to persuade the chief to change his mind just before the meeting, "but it was clear to me he has no intention of rescinding his resignation."

Halon, who was hired May 1, plans to leave his $1,562 a month job July 21, but said he has no definite plan beyond that.

Rohnert Park Woman Enters Innocent Plea

Sara Lynn Harris, 22, of Rohnert Park, pleaded innocent yesterday in Central Sonoma Municipal Court to charges of voluntary manslaughter, driving under the influence of drugs and possession of marijuana.

Judge Frank J. Passalacqua set a preliminary hearing for Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. A request for release on her own recognizance was rejected and bail was set at $1,000.

Miss Harris was arrested Thursday when Cotati police said she was the driver of a car that struck a bicycle ridden by Donna Conley, 27, of Rohnert Park, and her son, Sam, 2. Mrs. Conley died from accident injuries Saturday.

Police Arrest Son For Assault

A fight between a father and son yesterday at the Bermuda Palms resulted in the father being treated at the hospital and the son arrested on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon.

The father, Alwin Igelon Sprague, 77, of 737 Francisco Boulevard, was treated at Marin General Hospital for multiple bruises, according to hospital reports.

The son, Stanley Charles Sprague, 42, same address, was booked into Marin County Jail with bail set at $10,000 to appear this afternoon in Marin Municipal Court.

According to police, the two got into an argument which led to the fight and the police being called in yesterday shortly after midnight. Police reported that the son's fists could be considered as deadly weapons when he assaulted his father.

Boaters Upset By Pier Policy

Angry residents of boats docked along the Napa Street pier in Sausalito hurled threats at city council last night when it ordered them to vacate the dilapidated structure. (Another Sausalito City Council story, page 1.)

"See you in the streets," one youth called as the disgruntled group of about 30 persons stalked out of the council chamber. "Barricade our dock and we'll tear your barricade down, again and again if we have to," another cried.

The heated words resulted from the council's decision to abate and vacate the pier where approximately 30 persons live in yachts, houseboats and other structures including sheds and a former icehouse.

The council placed the matter in the hands of Fire Chief Robert L. Halon who had recommended the condemnation on the grounds the pier is unsafe. Halon said he would give the boaters two weeks to find new berthings, then order the pier abandoned.

Most of the residents, many of them young people, objected to the fact that Mayor Robin Sweeny had closed the public hearing on the subject without allowing many to voice their opinions.

Councilman Evert Heynneman made the same protest and abstained in the vote, as did Councilman Sally Stanford. "All who wanted to speak were not given the chance to do so and I did not feel this meeting was properly conducted," Heynneman complained.

The council agreed to declare the pier off limits after Halon said he could "not take the responsibility for anything that happens on that pier. I have no guarantee we can fight a fire on it."

The chief said the pier is deteriorating rapidly and noted that a portion had collapsed in early May. "There are bare wires and gas lines strung along the pier on dry-rotted planking and this creates a serious fire hazard," Halon explained.

Owner El Halpring said he had applied for a building permit to restore the structure and said he has been trying to get city permission to make the repairs for approximately three years. Halpring indicated the renovation could be completed from 90 to 120 days after the permit is granted.

But the council majority said it did not want to take the chance that someone might be injured before the repairs were finished. "I can't go to bed at night and be responsible for your safety," Mayor Sweeny told the resident. "At least you have a bed to go to; we won't if you close the pier," one woman replied.

Many complained they would have no place to berth their boats during the repairs and others said the pier was not in as bad a shape as Halon had said.

Stanley X. Cook, attorney for the residents, pleaded for more time to prepare a case, since the pier dweller had received no notice of the city's plans to abate the structure.

But the council refused to grant a continuance. "By the time you have time to prepare a case, someone could get hurt or killed," Councilman Stephen A. Fraser said, adding "We must protect the health and safety of all city residents."

The judge also upheld the right of the government to protect Mrs. Onassis, a decision which a government spokesman said set a precedent.

New Setback For Wolfback Developer

The Sausalito City Council added another chapter to the continuing saga of a proposed development for Wolfback Ridge last night by sending the developer back to the drawing board.

But the council kept the long-delayed 204-unit subdivision alive by promising to "look favorably" on a tentative map for the project if it is resubmitted, complete with the latest changes the city is demanding.

It was the latest in a long line of setbacks for Edward R. Fitzsimmons and Frank Lynch who have been trying, unsuccessfully, for more than two years to develop 160 acres of land they own on the ridge. (Lynch is currently facing foreclosure proceedings on his part of the property and the court has given him until July 25 to obtain city approval of the map, an indication the project will finally be allowed to proceed.)

The changes the council wants are those recently suggested by the city's planning commission and open space committee, a group of citizens and officials charged with examining remaining open space in the city and deciding what should be preserved.

In a recent report the committee said the ridge would not be suitable for acquistion as a public park or recreational area and indicated it could be developed if ridge lines, natural springs, rock knolls and certain tree stands are saved.

The group recommended that the developers be granted additional density to make up for the land they will use in the process and suggested that cluster housing be utilized to preserve as much open area as possible.

Fitzsimmons agreed to make the changes and return for further consideration at the council July 18 meeting.

Councilman Stephen A. Fraser protested the council should make no decision in the matter, since it is possible the ridge may yet be included in the federal Golden Gate Natural Recreation Area or in proposed county purchase of open space.

City Atty. Leland H. Jordan said he did not believe that possible acquistion of the land by public agencies was a legal reason for denying a subdivision map.

Fraser and Mayor Robin Sweeny voted against the motion. Mrs. Sweeny said the council had passed a one-year moratorium on all subdivisions in the city in April, both to provide time for the open space review and for a revision of Sausalito's subdivision ordinance. She said she could not support the subdivision until that ordinance had been revised.

The Sausalito City Council Also:

CLAIM — Rejected a $413 damage claim for Emerson Burnett of Sausalito who contends that Sausalito police did that amount of damage when they mistakenly came to his residence in search of a dying man and broke into the home.

ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES — Adopted an ordinance making all establishments serving alcoholic beverages as conditionally permitted uses in the city.

GARBAGE — At the request of Bay Cities Refuse Service, approved a hike in garbage rates which will bring the monthly cost of collection (for one can) from $2.60 to $3 and increase commercial rates from $1.90 to $2.50 a cubic yard.

APPOINTMENTS — Voted to reappoint Thomas May and Elvia Farnham to the city library board and Paul Kozak to the recreation commission.

LIBRARY — Received a petition from Dean Carey containing 50 signatures of persons protesting the city library's recent decision to close at 6 p.m. on Thursday and Friday nights.

Roth Upset By 'Beeper' Into Court

Although more than 20 months of mechanical surveillance at Marin's Civic Center ended Monday, enough remains to irritate at least one attorney.

Former Municipal Court Judge Hadden W. Roth objected to the use of a mechanical "beeper" device checking persons entering a courtroom for metal and asked Judge David R. Baty of Marin Municipal Court to order the device away from the door of his court.

The judge took the motion under submission after Roth called use of the device for an afternoon of routine arraignments and pleadings "part of this paranoid thinking that continues."

He noted that the Marin County Board of Supervisors had cut out checkpoints at entrances to the Civic Center and Hall of Justice except when "sensitive" cases like that of the San Quentin Six are being heard.

Lt. Ronald Retana, in charge of courthouse security for the sheriff's department, said that although the supervisors cut out searches at all entrances to the buildings, they did not cut security on the court floor itself.

He said the checkpoints at courtroom doors that Roth objected to will be used randomly and often although in the past they were used only for the so-called sensitive cases.

The device, which was used on courtroom doors both Monday and yesterday, supplements roving patrols.

Elimination of the checkpoints by the board during a recent budget session is expected to save taxpayers about $100,000.

Fischer Apologizes For 'Petty' Conduct

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Bobby Fischer made a full and penitent apology to Boris Spassky today, and organizers of the world chess championship match said the two would meet for their first game Sunday night.

The organizers said it had been agreed in principle to hold the drawing tonight to determine which player would have the white pieces and with them the first move.

The young American, in a letter delivered by hand this morning to the world chess champion from the Soviet Union, apologized for his "disrespectful behavior."

Fischer, whose delayed arrival doubled the prize money for both him and Spassky but also started an avalanche of confusion, asked the Russian to "accept my sincerest apology."

"I simply became carried away by my petty dispute over money with the Icelandic chess organizers," he wrote.

The written apology from the American challenger was one of the chief conditions posed by the Russians before Spassky would sit down at the chess board with Fischer.

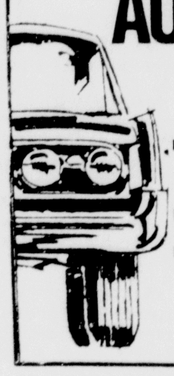

Fischer told Spassky: "I have offended you and your country, the Soviet Union, where chess has a prestigious position."

The temperamental American also apologized to Dr. Max Euwe, president of the International Chess Federation, the Icelanders, "the thousands of fans around the world and especially to the millions of fans and the many friends I have in the United States."

However, Fischer brushed aside a demand from the Soviet Chess Federation that he forfeit the first match because of his tardy arrival. He said this "would place me at a tremendous handicap" and he didn't believe the "world's cahmpion desires such an advantage in order to play me."

The League of Nations was dissolved Jan. 10, 1946.

Two Parcels May Be Moratorium-Exempt

The Mill Valley City Council last night held its first public hearing on a proposed building ban in East Mill Valley and pinpointed two parcels it may exempt from such a moratorium on building.

At the suggestion of Councilman Robert E. Burton, the council tentatively agreed to exclude a hillside parcel on Shelter Ridge, which overlooks Upper Richardson Bay, and a parcel along the Highway 101 Frontage Road, north of the Enco Service station and south of Sycamore Avenue.

The council directed the city attorney to draft an alternative ordinance for its consideration which incorporates the proposed boundary changes.

About 80 persons attended the council meeting and three or four renewed previous arguments for a moratorium, saying it was needed to give the city time to prepare a general plan.

No one spoke against a moratorium and no objection was made to the possible exemption of the two parcels.

The Shelter Ridge parcel is owned by developer Warner Odenthal. During last night's public hearing, he asked the council to exempt a different parcel, which he also owns, from the construction ban.

He said he planned to develop an office building-restaurant complex on the site. He estimated the project would yield $75,000 in two years in property taxes for Mill Valley.

Burton opposed Odenthal's request, but recommended that the developer's adjacent hillside parcel be excluded. The hillside lot, Burton said, could be excluded because it is geographically separate from the remainder of the moratorium area.

The parcel along the frontage road was tentatively lifted from the moratorium area to allow the construction of a private sports club and restaurant complex on the site.

A group of Marin County residents, represented by Jeffrey Quiggle, plans to construct tennis and handball courts, an exercise gym, small boating facilities and a public restaurant on the property. Quiggle estimated the project will cost about $750,000.

The council agreed that a recreation club would be consistent with other land uses along the frontage road.

The new exemptions from the moratorium area were referred to the planning commission for study July 10. They will return July 17 to the city council with the commission's recommendations.

The Mill Valley City Council Also:

BOARD OF APPEALS — Approved the appointment of Edward Beattie of 410 Hilldale Way, to the city's board of appeals.

MINI-BOARD — Approved the appointment of Edith H. Freeman, of 183 Molino Avenue, to the human rights mini-board.

BUS DEPOT — Cut the rent in half on the bus depot, from $250 to $125, at the request of proprietor James Rutherford, and agreed to draw up a six-month lease which will require Rutherford to provide special services in lieu of higher rent and work to build up his business.

ENCHANTED KNOLLS — Authorized the expenditure of $15,000, contributed by developer Odenthal, and $2,000 by the city, for the construction of a ball field in Enchanted Knolls.

REGIONAL PARK — Reaffirmed its support of a countywide regional park district — rather than several splinter park districts — to preserve open spaces in Marin. Councilman Edward J. Boessenecker voted against the resolution, saying he opposed the creation of an additional layer of government.

NONRETURNABLE — Instructed the city attorney to draft an ordinance requiring all local merchants to display an official sign at all soft drink counters which reminds customers that returnable bottles are ecologically and economically better than nonreturnable bottles.

MADRONA STREET — Directed the city attorney to draft an ordinance which changes the zoning at 16 Madrona Street from a multiple residential district to a general commercial district. The property is currently being used as an auto repair garage.

TIDELANDS ORDINANCE — Continued the matter and instructed the city attorney to draft an alternative ordinance that would enable the city council to adopt the ordinance at its meeting July 17 as an emergency measure.

YOUTH COMMISSION — Passed the first reading of an ordinance that would lengthen the term of office for members of the commission from one to two years.

DOG ORDINANCE — Changed the city's dog ordinance so that violations are infractions rather than misdemeanors.

PARKING ZONES — Passed the first reading of an ordinance that would establish eight 12-minute parking zones in the downtown business area of Mill Valley.

STOP SIGNS — Adopted a resolution placing stop signs at the intersection of Shelter Bay and Sycamore Avenues.

BUDDHIST CHURCH — Defeated a motion by Burton to appeal a decision by the city's planning commission granting a use permit to Marin Buddhist Church to use Brown's Hall. Burton and Councilman Robert E. Capron voted unsuccessfully to appeal the case to enable the council to study the tax exempt status of the proposed church property.

CITY EMPLOYEES — Went into closed session to confer with their representatives in the pending negotiations with Municipal employees, according to City Mgr. William H. Cunningham.

MEETING — Adjourned to 7:30 p.m. tomorrow to discuss the budget and unfinished items on last night's agenda.

Eagle Rank For Boy Scout, 14

Mark H. Rose, 14-year-old member of Boy Scout Troop 50, will receive the Eagle Scout rank Monday evening in a court of honor at the Sleepy Hollow Clubhouse.

Your Rose is a son of Frank H. and Lois Rose of 255 Van Winkle Drive, Sleepy Hollow. He will be a sophomore at Sir Francis Drake High School in San Anselmo in September.

Rose is a member of the Sleepy Hollow swimming team and school team, the school band, the California Scholarship Federation, the Drake Honor Crew, and the Marin Junior Rifle Club. He plays clarinet and piano, and likes to fish and hunt.

His Eagle project was planting trees at Point Reyes National Seashore. He has been Troop 50's scribe for two years, and assistant senior patrol leader.

Two Shot Dead After Lending Hand

SCURRY, Tex. (UPI)—Henry Shoemaker, 57, and his aunt Pebble Howard were driving near the outskirts of town when they saw a dog bite a young woman. They gave the woman a lift back into town.

The woman's father, enraged when he heard the story, grabbed a shotgun and ordered Shoemaker and his aunt to take him to the place where the dog attacked his daughter so he could shoot the animal.

When they refused, police said Wednesday, the man shot Shoemaker to death and then killed Miss Howard with a single shot when she jumped out of the car and tried to run away.

The man was jailed pending charges. His daughter was treated for dog bite wounds at a nearby hospital and released.

No U.S. Plans To Drop Troop Levels

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Despite the decision by North and South Korea to work to reduce tensions, the United States has no plans to reduce its troop level in South Korea.

"We have no plans to change or modify our military modernization program" in South Korea, State Department spokesman Charles W. Bray said Wednesday. "We have no plans to make any troop reductions."

Bray said the United States played no active role in the decision of the two Koreas to increase contacts.

New Busing Plan Presented To Court

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —A revised busing plan which would move 1,134 pupils to new elementary schools has been submitted to federal court by the city's office of desegregation.

The plan was submitted to Judge Stanley Weigel in advance of the September opening of school to give a chance for study to the National Association of the Advancement of Colored People.

A suit by the NAACP resulted in Judge Weigel's order for busing last year for elementary school pupils.

However, a boycott by students caused the failure of the original plan, leaving 47 schools out of balance when compared with state racial guidelines.

USSR Demands Naval Pullout At Guantanamo

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today demanded the "unconditional withdrawal" of the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay and pledged to continue supplying massive economic and military aid to Fidel Castro's Communist regime.

The Kremlin demand was made in a 4,000-word joint Soviet-Cuban communique published today as Castro left the Soviet Union after an 11-day visit..

"The Soviet leaders have once again stated that the Soviet Union resolutely condemns the economic and political blockade of Cuba conducted by the United States," the communique declared.

There must be an "unconditional withdrawal of the American Guantanamo naval base, which, contrary to the sovereign will of the Cuban people, exists on Cuban territory," it added.

The statement was immediately followed by a Soviet declaration to continue "all-round assistance to Cuba in the construction of a Socialist society, in strengthening the country's defense capacity and defending its revolutionary gains."

The 44-year-old Cuban leader boarded a plane in the Byelo-Russian capital of Minsk after an overnight visit there. He left Moscow yesterday.

Castro arrived in Havana this morning to a massive welcome.

Showdown On Pay Deadlock Avoided At Council Meeting

A possible showdown between the Mill Valley City Council and the city's unionized municipal employees over deadlocked contract negotiations was averted last night.

After being denied a place on the council agenda, union local president Dwight McCoy said members wanted to discuss their demands directly with the council.

"We feel we're not being represented properly by the negotiators for the city," McCoy said.

Speaking for his colleagues on the council, Robert E. Capron outlined the city's position in conciliatory fashion.

He told McCoy — and the union members in the audience — that the city had worked out a negotiating procedure with the union following last year's 33-day strike.

"We have a procedure and I think we should stick with it," Capron said. "Bargaining at a public meeting is inconsistent with the best interests of both sides."

When asked if the city's negotiator, Earl Leslie, accurately represents the council at bargaining sessions, Capron responded that Leslie represented the city about as accurately as the union's representatives reflect the interests of the membership.

Capron announced the city's two negotiators, Leslie and Herb Hearn, would meet again Thursday night with union representatives in an effort to break the deadlock that has stymied salary negotiations for weeks.

Another municipal employee, Marjorie Golden, stood up and asked again if the employees could meet directly with the council.

After Capron reaffirmed the council's unwillingness to bargain publicly, Councilman Edward J. Boessenecker said the council "will always be prepared to listen."

U.S. Spacemen Won't Fly Russia's Soyuz

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Russian cosmonauts and American astronauts may spend up to 48 hours docked during a joint, earth oribtal mission in 1975, but there is little chance they will fly each other's spacecraft.

"The pilots will be shown through the spacecraft, but any activity in that area probably would be a couple of flips of the hand control," said Glynn S. Lunney, head of the U.S. portion of the project.

The controls of the Russian Soyuz spacecraft are opposite those of the American Apollo spacecraft, and cosmonauts have had trouble flying the spacecraft in simulators at the Manned Spacecraft Center.

Astronauts said they probably would have the same problem in the Russian ships.

Lunney, director of the Apollo-Soyuz test project, said U.S. space officials will propose that the American spacecraft be launched 16 or 40 hours ahead of the Russian ship, because the Apollo is capable of orbiting the earth for 12 days, while the Soyuz can orbit only five days with one day of reserve.

The proposal will be made during the next two weeks, during meetings with a 25-member Russian delegation, he said. The meetings start today.

"We would expect the Soyuz to be launched in one of the first two (launch) windows, either 16 or 40 hours after the Apollo liftoff," Lunney said.

He said the Americans will send a normal three-man Apollo crew, while the Russians will send only two cosmonauts instead of the normal three. Lunney said he did not know why the Russian crew was reduced.

The experiments to be performed both during the docking and afterwards have not been decided yet, and will probably not be determined during the next two weeks, he said. The two groups will concentrate on the fundamental plans of the mission and the design requirements of the docking apparatus.

He said the crews and other principal members of the U.S. team will be chosen within a year. Donald K. "Deke" Slayton, one of the original seven astronauts who has never flown because of a minor heart condition, is considered a sentimental favorite.

Slayton was put back on flying status this year and said he would like to make the flight.

The mission will orbit about 125 miles above the earth.

SACRAMENTO ROUNDUP

Bill Aimed At Nudity At Drive-Ins Defeated

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Senate has turned back a bill making it illegal for a drive-in theater to show movies depicting nudity or sexual conduct that can be seen from a street.

The measure by Sen. John Harmer, R-Glendale, was defeated Wednesday on a 17-15 vote with 21 votes needed for approval. But Harmer kept the proposal alive by asking for reconsideration of the vote.

Opponents said the bill would put the theaters out of business and could possibly bar the showing of "The Ten Commandments" at a drive-in.

But Harmer argued that there are many persons who legitimately object to not being able to drive down a freeway without exposing their children to what he called "degeneracy."

In addition to sexual conduct and nudity, the measure would affect movies containing obscenities or showing "sexual excitement," sadomasochistic abuse, defecation, urination or persons observing such activities.

Harmer's bill also would make it a misdemeanor to show such movies if they could be seen from outside of the theater by minors.

He said law enforcement officials have complained they often have a problem in breaking up crowds of children who have gathered outside drive-ins with "x" rated films.

However, Sen. Ralph C. Dills, D-Gardena, said that of the movies nominated for Oscars as best picture of the year during the past four years, only four could be shown in drive-ins under Harmer's bill.

Sen. Donald L. Grunsky, R-Watsonville, also argued that the measure was so broad that it would put drive-in theaters out of business, a contention Harmer denied.

Grunsky also said the measure could bar the showing of "The Ten Commandments."

ROAD FUNDS

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Reversing an earlier vote, the Assembly has passed a bill giving the legislature power to review the nearly $1 billion state highway budget despite arguments that the measure would result in a "porkbarrel."

The house approved the proposal by Assemblyman Willie L. Brown Jr., D-San Francisco, on a 42-28 vote, just one more than the minimum needed, and sent it to the Senate.

Last month the bill was defeated, but Brown was granted reconsideration.

Gov. Ronald Reagan vetoed legislation similar to Brown's measure last year.

In debate Wednesday, Assemblyman John L. E. Collier, R-Los Angeles, called for support of the bill, declaring the Division of Highways is "the most arrogant, dictatorial agency in state government today."

But Assemblyman John Foran, D-San Francisco, said the bill would create a "porkbarrel" for lawmakers who would insist on inclusion of pet projects in their districts when the budget comes up for review.

Assemblyman Frank Lanterman, R-La Canada, countered by saying arguments that there is no "pork" in the present system is "one of the silliest fairy tales I've ever heard in my life."

Currently, the division's highway construction budget is continuously appropriate and is not subject to annual review like those of other state departments. The measure would give lawmakers a chance to go over the highway budget each year.

PEACEFUL PLAN

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill aimed at preventing trouble by outsiders before it starts at California schools has been sent to the Assembly by the Senate.

The measure by Sen. Fred Marler Jr., R-Redding, was approved Wednesday on a 28-4 vote.

Marler said the bill would "prevent roving gangs from going up and down halls" in schools looking for trouble.

Currently, Marler said, school principals can only order them off school grounds after the outsiders have started trouble.

Under the bill anyone entering school property except the school's personnel, students and pupils parents would be required to register with the school's principal. Failure to register would be a misdemeanor.

If the principal did not approve of the outsider's presence, he could order him off the property for 48 hours if the person posed a "reasonable" threat to the safety of students.

The measure would apply only during school hours.

PROTECTION

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Senate has passed and sent to the Assembly a bill aimed at halting the mutilation of horses but that could also send a person to prisoc if he kicked and wounded his neighbor's dog.

The measure by Sen. H.L. Richardson, R-Arcadia, was approved Wednesday on a 27-1 vote without debate.

A spokesman for the senator said the measure was aimed at halting the mutilation of horses, which he said had been occurring in Richardson's district.

Currently, it is a misdemeanor to maliciously kill, maim, would, torture or mutilate an animal belonging to another wound, torture or mutilate an

Richardson's bill would make it a felony or a misdemeanor at the discretion of the judge with the maximum penalty of five years in jail.

RIVER PLANS

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—The Senate has narrowly passed a bill trying to straighten out legal snafus created by the meandering Colorado River.

The measure by Sen. William E. Coombs, R-Rialto, is designed to put some former bottomlands of the river into private ownership and to find out where the bed of the river once was.

Coombs said the bill would help solve some "horrendous legal and engineering problems" by permitting the state Lands Commission to "enter into negotiations" with landowners.

When the negotiations were finished, the commission could deed over some of the land that the state now claims to own. The commission is opposed to the bill on grounds that all bottomlands are owned by the state.

The largest landowner involved is the Santa Fe Railway Co. The bill was sent to the Assembly on a 21-12 vote, the bare minimum required.

Senate leader James R. Mills, D-San Diego, argued unsuccessfully that the bill would be a give-way "when we should be presrving this valuable recreational source ... for the people of Southern California.

The land involved is in the Needles area in San Bernardino County. Coombs said the landowners have been paying taxes on the land for 15 years because they thought they owned it.

Mills said when a river's course is changed by "an act of nature" the owner of the land beside the river does take over ownership of land formerly under the river. However, he said the problem is that the Colorado changed its course because of dams that were constructed.

ADVISERS

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, has announced formation of a five-member Assembly Advisory Council on Public Employes Relations.

"We need a fail-safe system, one which gives both labor and management a place to go if negotiations reach a dead end," Moretti said Wednesday in a prepared statement.

Moretti said the council would hold hearings in three California cities and submit recommendations to the Assembly by the end of the year on ways to reform public employer-employe relations.

Benjamin Aaron, a professor of law and director of the Institute of Industrial Relations at UCLA, was named council chairman.

Other members include Howard S. Block, a Santa Ana attorney; Morris L. Myers, a San Francisco arbitrator and mediator; Don Vial, chairman of the Center for Labor Research and Education, Institute of Industrial Relations, University of California at Berkeley, and Donald H. Wollett, professor of law at University of California, Davis.

John C. Oglesby, longtime Marin County engineer and surveyor who died Tuesday, had served as city engineer for every city in the county during his career except Fairfax.

(The Independent-Journal yesterday incorrectly reported that the exception was Larkspur. Oglesby did engineering work for that city for many years.)

Home Loan Ceiling Standards Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal housing department has proposed standards for seven metropolitan areas governing the amounts of settlement costs in connection with goverment-backed home loans.

The proposed standards, published in the Federal Register yesterday, are a first step toward establishing national ceilings on settlement costsin connection with mortgage transactions insured by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The standards would cover the metropolitan areas of Cleveland, Newark, N.J., San Francisco, Seattle, St. Louis, Washington and its Maryland and Virginia suburbs which is considered one area.

Although the ceilings would cover loans insured by HUD's Federal Housing Administration, loans guaranteed by the Veterans Administration are expected to be covered later.

It is also contemplated that standards will be set in the future for additional areas where George Romney, secretary of housing and urban development, determines that excessive charges are being collected from mortgages and sellers.

Under the Home Finance Act of 1970, a comprehensive survey was made of all HUD and VA closings during March 1971. Analysis of this cost data and information as to the nature of the services rendered resulted in the development of proposed maximum charges which were then reviewed by HUD insuring offices personnel for the seven areas.

In Washington, which HUD used as an example, the new maximums would limit, on a $20,000 home, the cost of property survey to $55, of a title examination to $90, of title insurance to $85, of a termite inspection certificate to $15, of a closing fee of $50 — or a total of $295 for these services.

HUD said thesefigures would result in an average cost revealed in the survey of $216 and from a maximum cost of $394.

For Cleveland, the estimated reduction from maximum cost would be $318, for Neward $407, for San Francisco, $591, for Seattle $509, for St. Louis $276 and for the Maryland-Virginia area $451.

Petaluma Vandalism

Nick Gravenson, 1304 Marion Way, Petaluma, told police yesterday that someone sprayed blue paint over one side of his car while parked outside his home. Damage was estimated at $100.

FRONT ROW SEATS — Crowds of curious youngsters scramble on fence posts and lean on bicycles to get a good view of the fire sweeping a ridge in Novato. The blaze yesterday burned 35 to 40 acres of trees, undergrowth and grass before it was contained. The smoke was seen for many miles, attrating youngsters who apparently hadn't seen enough fire and smoke from fireworks July 4th. It was later determined that firecrackers and matches, in the hands of a child, caused the blaze.

Disease Center Readies Vaccine

ATLANTA (UPI)—The National Center for Disease Control (NCDC) said Thursday a more potent vaccine will be available for the 1972-73 influenza season.

The agency issued a report on the collected recommendations of the Public Health Service Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices. The report said the influenza vaccine for the coming winter has more antibodies than prior products and should give better results.

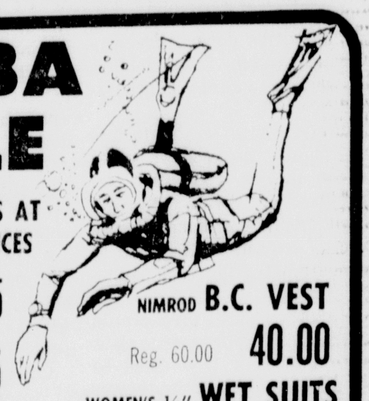

The report did not make any prediction on the flu outlook for 1972-73, but it recommended influenza vaccine be given to "chronically ill patients and possibly to older persons in general."

"Because some influenza occurs each year, annual immunization of 'high risk' patients is indicated as a routine procedure regardless of the amount of influenza expected in any specific geographic area," the report said.

The 13th amendment to the Constitution abolished slavery in the United States.

Plan For 44 Units Approved

The Novato Plan Review Committee last night approved precise development plans for 44 townhouses at the southern end of Libra Drive.

The mater plan by Condiotti Enterprises Inc. provides for the two single-family lots of one acre each and nine acres of open space, as well as the five acres of townhouses.

A previous plan for 52 townhouses on the site was rejected by the city council last year.

The committee also approved plan materials for landscaping the extension of Ignacio Boulevard to meet San Jose Boulevard — materials which have variety and low maintenance costs.

Tear Gas Mars Giant Welcome

NEW DELHI (UPI)—Prime Minister Indira Gandhi returned to the capital today to a tumultuous welcome marred by a burst of tear gas bombs.

Five thousand people brought to the airport by the ruling Congress party and Communist officials wildly cheered Mrs. Gandhi as she drove past in a white jeep.

But about 200 yards away, the police held back a 1,000-strong mob of Hindu nationalist Jana Singh party workers waving black flags and shouting slogans to protest the Simla summit agreement with Pakistan.

Novato Ridge Fire Ruins 35-40 Acres

Fire swept across a ridge in Novato, burning from 35 to 40 acres of trees, undergrowth and grass and a small workshed.

The blaze, which sent a large cloud of smoke over the southeast section of the city, started at 4:26 p.m. yesterday and threatened several homes near Canyon Road, according to Fire Chief Jack W. Kidder.

The fire was caused by a child playing with matches and firecrackers, the chief said. It started near 648 Canyon Road and burned along the top of the ridge south of Novato General Hospital. The fire also headed for Chamberlain Avenue, the Hill Road Convalescent Hospital and Ridge Road.

"It took about two hours to get this one contained," the chief said. "It was a very inaccessible area. Everything had to be by shank's mare. We had hose out about 800-900 feet."

About 20 youths volunteered help, extending lines and cutting fire breaks. A tanker from the Marin County Fire Department was at the scene and an engine from Hamilton Air Force Base covered the main fire station.

The workshed destroyed was at the rear of 648 Canyon Road. The property was occupied by Kurt Cushing and owned by William Algrand and Marvin Soiland, the chief reported.

Firemen were at the scene all night and mopping up continued today. People were advised to stay out of the area because some of the badly burned trees may topple.

At the same time a two-acre grass fire was burning off Hayden Drive near the Moose Lodge and moving toward homes on Reichert Avenue.

Then the wind changed and that fire burned itself out away from the homes, the chief said.

Market Entry Hurdle Cleared

LONDON (AP) — The bill taking Britain into the European Common Market has cleared its last major hurdle, and apparently the nation will join the European Economic Community on Jan. 1.

The legislation now will get a routine third reading in the House of Commons and then go to theqHouse of Lords for a vote. Approval is certain in the upper house.

The House of Commons approved the bill late last night.

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidant, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.
Other areas:
San Francisco, clean air.
San Jose, light air pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches, and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, while the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Former Marin Man Kills Wife, Self In East Bay

I-J Special Report

WALNUT CREEK — A retired Army colonel who was a longtime Greenbrae resident shot his wife to death and killed himself in their Rossmoor apartment, Walnut Creek police said.

Found dead in their residence in the retirement community were Col. Leon Richard Schinazi, 77, and his wife of 18 months, Ann, 63.

Detective Gary Johnson today said that apparently the shootings took place about 1:30 a.m. Sunday, just after Mrs. Schinazi walked into the apartment on her return from a trip to Europe.

"We found literature in the apartment that indicated he intended to do this," Johnson said.

A .22-caliber revolver was found between the two bodies, the officer said.

Neighbors later reported hearing unidentified noises at about 1:30 a.m., but they did not investigate at the time. A grandson of the colonel found the bodies Tuesday afternoon.

Schinazi had lived with his first wife, also named Ann, for about 22 years in Greenbrae. She died three years ago.

He was born in France and came to this country in 1914, when he enlisted in the U.S. Army. He served in the Vera Cruz Expedition of 1914 and both world wars and the Korean War. He sawextensive service in the Orient during peacetime.

Five years after joining the army he received his American citizenship and an Army commission shortly afterward.

In World War II, after the recapture of the Philippines, he became commander of the Port of Manila and after the war served as commander of the port of Shanghai.

Prior to World War II, Schiazi worked as a civilian for a time as manager for the States Steamship Lines and was in charge of shipping for the China Import and Export Lumber Co. of Shanghai.

He retired from the Army in 1954 after serving as deputy port director of operations for the San Francisco port of embarkation. After retirement, he became an artist of some note.

LEON R. SCHINAZI
Ex-Greenbrae resident

The colonel's only son, Leon Richard Jr., died about five years ago.

He is survived by a daughter, Pauline S. Witts of Walnut Creek, and six grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were pending today at Oak Park Hills Chapel in Walnut Creek. Burial will be next week in Arlington National Cemetery, Va. The family prefers contributions to the California Jesuit Missionaries, 284 Stanyan Street, San Francisco, or to a favorite charity.

Funeral arrangements for Mrs. Schinazi, whose survivors have not been located by Walnut Creek officials, are pending at the same chapel.

Airline Cancels Concorde Order

MONTREAL (UPI) — Air Canada announced Tuesday it has cancelled its order for four Anglo-French supersonic Concordes, priced at betweeen $50 million-$60 million each.

Yves Pratte, Air Canada board chairman, said the airline had conducted an extensive marketing survey in Canada on the potential for premium-priced supersonic travel.

He said the study, coupled with an exhaustive operational evaluation of the aircraft, indicated the Concorde was not now suitable for Air Canada's type of operation.

Federal Banks To Tell Of Conditions

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The government's three banking regulatory agencies today issued a call for a statement of condition of all banks under their jurisdiction at the close of business Friday June 30.

The order applies to banks supervised by the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Controller of the Currency.

Pair Booked In Probe Of Burglary

Two San Francisco men were arrested last night on suspicion of burglary, possession of burglary tools and loitering on private property.

Demetrius Chris Tsiodoelus, 35, and Veselin George Radunovich, 42, were booked into Marin County Jail and held to appear this afternoon in Marin Municipal Court.

San Rafael police today reported being tipped at 11:51 p.m. yesterday that there was a burglary in progress at Jim Jam's Restaurant at 810 Third Street. They found Tsiodoelus and Radunovich behind the restaurant.

The restaurant had not been entered, but pry marks were found on the rear door and in their car, police said, was found a screwdriver that matched the pry marks and bore the same color paint as the door.

A search of the car, according to police, also yielded a .32-caliber pistol, five flashlights, a pry bar, sledge, chisel and plastic gloves.

Some Good Meat News For Consumers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz says meat prices should begin to stabilize in a few months when cattle now in feedlots reach the butchering block.

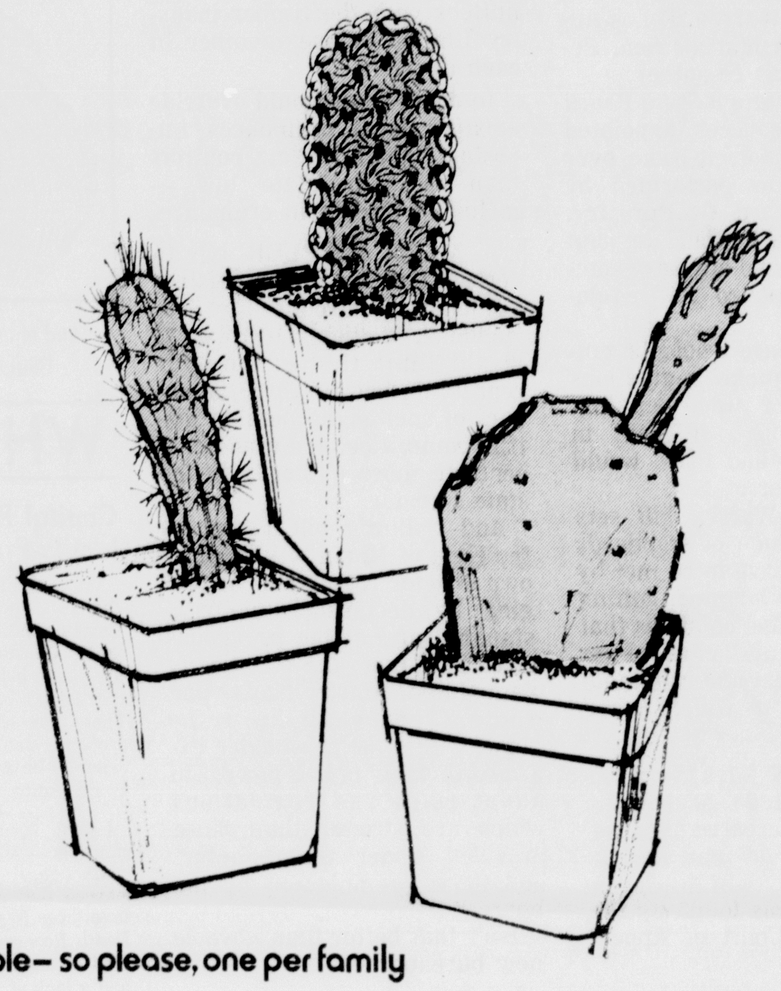

Shultz and other members of the Cost of Living Council met with grocers yesterday in the first of three sessions with food industry representatives. President Nixon ordered the meetings last Friday at a White House conference on rising food prices.

More Bureaucracy To Correct Law?

Two years ago, as result of considerable outcry over some questionable logging practices in West Marin, the Marin County Board of Supervisors enacted a strict county logging control ordinance.

That ordinance would be made a nullity by a bill now before the California Legislature.

THE MEASURE is Assembly Bill 2346 by Assemblymen Edwin L. Z'berg, D-Sacramento, and Charles Warren, D-Los Angeles — with Marin's Sen. Peter H. Behr as co-author.

It would create a State Board of Forest Resources, appointed by the governor, to take over all duties now performed by the State Board Of Forestry. This new board would appoint district technical advisory committees, to police its regulations.

The new board would be empowered to make regulations for control of timer cutting, which might be different in each district, and these would have the power of law.

The Z'berg-Warren bill sets forth a multitude of standards which would have to be met by any regulation adopted, getting down to such fine points as that "every one-hundredth of an acre has at least one countable tree 12 inches or taller" after logging.

THIS NEW bureaucracy, with its multitude of regulations, would be created because a flaw in the present Forest Practices Act (which dates back to 1945) was found by the First District Court of Appeal last year.

In a case originating in San Mateo County, the court ruled that the portion of the present act which delegates authority to district forest practice committees dominated by timber industry representatives is unconstitutional.

The Z'berg-Warren bill would go a long way around the barn to correct that. It would set up a whole new system, spell out standards minutely, then create new forest practices committees with the timber industry limited to one member in each district.

In doing so, it would override existing local ordinances imposing tighter logging controls than those in state law — including the Marin ordinance.

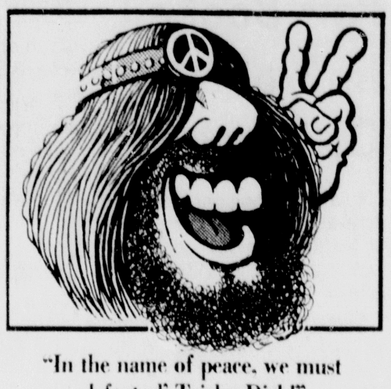

A MUCH SIMPLER bill to correct the fault in the existing act has been introduced by Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka. It would limit timber industry representation to three members of each eight-member district committee, and would concentrate more authority in the state forester.

And Collier's bill preserves the right of Marin to impose its own stricter regulations on logging by declaring: "notwithstanding any of the provisions of this chapter, the counties of San Mateo, Marin, Napa, and Santa Clara shall have the right, within the reasonable exercise of their police power, to adopt rules and regulations which are stricter than those provided under this chapter, and those promulgated by the board."

Isn't that better than a whole new bureaucracy?

Hooded Orioles

Bullock's oriole is the common Marin variety of that colorful family. However, some years the hooded oriole, more common in Arizona than in Northern California, nexts in the palms in Corte Madera. A bird-watching friend in Larkspur has had these refugees from Sunland at her feeder several times this year. They are not so deeply colored as other orioles. Their orange looks like it is part lemon.

"In the name of peace, we must defeat ol' Tricky Dick!"

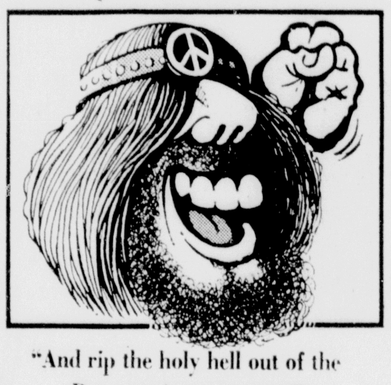

"Heavy! Right on!"

"So, to further our cause we must go to Miami Beach!"

"Far out, Baby!"

"And rip the holy hell out of the Democratic convention!"

"Man! Do I ever dig your logic!"

Capital Punishment Limits Proposed

Once again, capital punishment fills the newspaper; once again I find myself speaking out, trying to be heard. I have no official title nor various initials behind my name, but believe that my opinion on the subject is a valid and realistic one. There is no cut and dried solution to this problem of to kill or not to kill, but I believe I have a logical suggestion that I would like to pass along to your readers.

I first became interested in capital punishment while in college some 10-12 years ago. I did a little research and learned that an extremely high percentage (over 80 per cent) of all inmates on Death Row were in a minority of some kind or other — race, lack of education, and a lack of money. It has been proved over and over again, with money to hire a lawyer who values money for money's sake, one can literally get away with murder. This is a land of free enterprise, but there must be some limitations.

A year ago, my aunt, while vacationing in Hawaii, surprised a burglar. She was knocked down and tried to get up three times, each time her efforts failed. The end result of this burglary was my aunt's body was discovered with 34 knife wounds in her. Since then the person has been caught and tried (for another crime) and is on Death Row in San Quentin today. Should he be paroled in seven or eight years, the Hawaiian authorities have assured the family that they will press charges and try him for the murder of my aunt.

In no way can I condone such an action. . .But I cannot see killing her killer. It would not bring her back, nor would it satisfy any revengeful feelings I may hold. . .

If there must be capital punishment on the books, let it be for the safety of the lives of policemen, prison guards, inmates in prison, and firemen who are killed by snipers while fighting fires.

Capital punishment is not a deterrent. In the heat of anger or fear, who stops to think of the consequences? It does, however, take time and thought to kill a policeman, prison guard, or a fireman, perhaps the thought under these circumstances would also include the thought that if caught, one would get the death penalty without the benefit of appeal if found guilty. . .

Law Permits Falsehoods To Accompany Ballots

By EARL G. WATERS

A glaring weakness in the election laws demands prompt attention by the Legislature. This is the matter of the handling of pro and con arguments relating to ballot propositions.

Along with sample ballot mailings is included a pamphlet containing the texts of constitutional amendments, initiatives and referendums to be voted upon. Additionally, the pamphlet sets forth analyses by the legislative counsel and legislative analyst. Both agencies are non-partisan arms of the Legislature.

The law also requires that the pamphlets contain pro and con arguments submitted by partisans. The secretary of state has the duty of preparing the pamphlet. He must determine which of the arguments submitted are to be used.

To assist him in the selection, the Legislature has set forth guidelines. Priorities are given to legislators for ballot measures originating with the Legislature. Sponsoring lawmakers submit arguments in favor, while opposing arguments are provided by members who voted against the proposition.

IN THE MATTER of initiatives, those who sponsored the measure are chosen for supporting arguments. Priority for opposition arguments is given first to bona fide associations. Lacking such opposition, the secretary of state is required to select from submissions by individual citizens.

It is in this last area the weak spots develop. Just how the secretary of state, whose position demands he remain neutral, is to determine which argument to use is in limbo.

Worse still, if only one citizen submits an argument, he is required to print it regardless of its factuality. Thus, one person out of 20 million citizens can cause to be printed a totally false statement which then is mailed to the millions of voters at public expense.

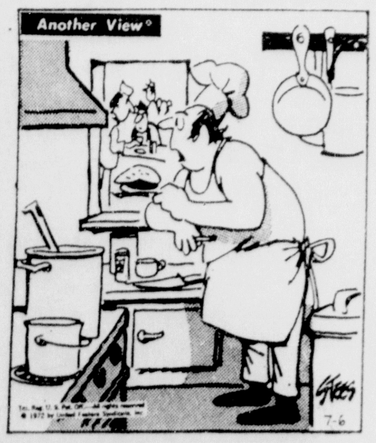

That is exactly what happened in the June primary. Proposition One, the Veterans Farm and Home Loan Bond Act, was without any organized opposition. But one citizen did write an anti argument. Proposition 1 passed overwhelmingly by a 2-to-1 vote. Yet nearly 2 million votes were cast against it. Just how many were influenced and misled as to the purpose and effect of the proposition by that lone person cannot be measured.

THE ARGUMENT submitted against the measure by Wilbur Mclaughlin, who identified himself as "U.S. Marine Corps, Retired" contained statements represented as facts which were completely baseless. Not only did McLaughlin not speak for the Marine Corps or any organized veteran group, he demonstrated a total ignorance of the program. People may differ in viewpoint but there is no excuse for permitting the publication of erroneous data.

Questioned about this, Sec. of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. said he had no authority to pass judgment on the accuracy of arguments. He said since there was only one submission he was required to print it regardless of its recognizable falseness.

Brown acknowledged the weakness of the law and said he had sought to secure legislation which would have required the legislative analyst to review ballot arguments and point out inaccuracies.

The problem of devising a fair and impartial method of weeding out false ballot statements is no doubt difficult. But it is one which screams for a solution.

Jackson Bill Seeks To End Haphazard Controls Of Land Use

(Reprinted from St. Louis Post-Dispatch)

A bill which could have a monumental impact on the quality of American life and on the appearance of the landscape has been approved 14 to 2 by the Senate Interior Committee. Sponsored principally by Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, the proposed Land Use Policy and Planning Assistance Act of 1972 seeks to transform the far-reaching decisions on land use from the present chaos and anarchy of conflicting local governmental and individual initiatives to a more rational process.

Recognizing that the haphazard development of such facilities as airports and highways, electric power plants and mass transit, housing subdivisions and industrial parks can have a devastating effect on the environment, the Jackson bill would set up in the Interior Department a National Advisory Board on Land Use Policy to co-ordinate federal and federally assisted programs that have a significant impact on land use. The secretary of the interior would also be empowered to establish ad hoc advisory committees to help resolve state-federal land use conflicts.

THE ENVIRONMENTAL thrust of the bill, however, would be exerted through its requirement that the states devise complete and comprehensive plans for land use which not only provide for the orderly development of building projects but also for parks and for the preservation in their undisturbed state of areas for recreatioc such as rivers, beaches and woodlands.

The development of state land use programs would be aided with federal funds, on a nine to one matching basis, for a period of eight years at the rate of $100 million a year. States which failed to comply with the terms of the act within five years would be subject to a cutoff of federal planning funds and the withholding of federal highway, airport and land and water conservation funds, which would be administered by a new Office of Land Use Policy Administration within the Interior Department.

Although the bipartisan Jackson bill has a good chance of passing the Senate, the prospect for final enactment of effective land use legislation is dimmed by the anticipated emergency from the House Interior Committee of a weaker bill which is being shaped by Chairman Wayne N. Aspinall, who is not noted for his sympathy for environmental goals. Without strong pressure on the states applied through federal standards and funds, the 80,000 units of local;government which now make most of the decisions on land use planning and management are likely to continue the present trend of profligate waste and destruction of land resources.

LAND, WHICH LIKE other ingredients of the American economy is often treated as a throw-away commodity, has become too precious a resource to be left to what the Senate committee calls the decisions of "selfish, short-term and private" interests.

A basic restructuring of traditional legal and administrative arrangements for land use planning and management is necessary both to preserve a livable environment and to implement social policies providing equal opportunities for housing and education.

McGovern Quiet On Foreign Role; New Isolationism Draws Liberals

At a time when the great thrust of President Nixon's policies is in the field of international affairs, it is perhaps understandable that his chief Democratic opponent should say very little about foreign policy.

San. George McGovern, of course, has one major foreign policy plank: get out of Vietnam on any terms. But he has been very quiet on other aspects of world relations, so quiet as to suggest almost a relapse to isolationism.

Now he has a group of brain trusters working on his foreign programs, and doubtless some interesting ideas will emerge. But insofar as Senator McGovern represents the discontents and disillusionments of the American public, he is certainly pulling in the isolationist direction.

OBVIOUSLY ANY Democratic aspirant would have hard sledding against the Nixon position. The opening to China and the agreements with the Soviet Union make a very strong groundwork. Any president in office, when world policies are going reasonably well, has a great advantage in running for re-election from the vantage point of world leader.

Senator McGovern's proposed cuts in defense spending also add up to very drastic isolationism, unless they are re-cast. A good deal of money could and should be saved from defense spending. Governmental commissions have proposed extensive reorganization and economies, few of which have come about. But McGovern cutbacks are complicated and severe. Their impact, taken literally, would reduce the American role in world affairs.

His proposal to diminish U.S. forces assigned to NATO, and to cut the number of U.S. aircraft carriers from 16 to six, have a direct bearing on the Middle East and combined efforts to deter Russian expansionism. Supporters of Israel, specifically, fear the McGovern policies, and he has gone some way to reassure them.

IT IS CURIOUS that isolationism should nowadays have become so attractive to liberals. Time was when a monopoly on America first was held on the far right. The argument now is that the best posture for the United States abroad is to stay healthy at home. Reaction against the Vietnam experience has spread to many other involvements, in many parts of the world.

Thus, if the United States were to plunge into domestic revolution of the magnitudes suggested in Senator McGovern's proposals, it would certainly have a bearing on American energy overseas. The United States would be inner-directed for a considerable time, just as it was during the early stages of the New Deal in 1933.

Senator McGovern's position is a very sharp break with the policies affirmed by the last four Democratic presidents. Few presidents have presented a more activist program than did John Kennedy.

In his inaugural address in 1960 he said: "Let every nation know, whether it wishes us well or ill, that we shall pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe to assure the survival and the success of liberty."

And again: "In the long history of the world, only a few generations have been granted the role of defending freedom in its hour of maximum danger. I do not shrink from this responsibility — I welcome it."

SUCH WORDS revealed the Cold War at its peak. They led to the Bay of Pigs and to deeper involvement in Vietnam. They are a far cry from the McGovern position today, supported as it is by most of the former Kennedyites, and by Sen. Edward Kennedy himself, who affirms that times have changed.

Thus the way is open, on the Democratic side, to the new isolationism. President Nixon's role in the changed times has been different. He has reduced the American commitment in Vietnam drastically but has not been able to liquidate it. He has opened major new relationships with the two Communist giants. He continues a strong defense posture.

When the foreign policy issues are more clearly on the table, it will be an important and critical debate for the American voters to decide.

No Urgency On Panama Treaty — Until That August Election

By PHIL NEWSOM

Now and then in a room in the State Department in Washington, the Panamanian ambassador and State Department officials sit down to discuss without urgency an issue which in January, 1964, took the lives of 22 Panamanians and two Americans but except for special occasions has been dormant most of the time since.

The issue is U.S. control of the Panama Canal, and most particularly a treaty to replace the one of 1903 which gave the United States that control "in perpetuity."

The fact that the talks are conducted without urgency is deliberate. The Nixon administration has no wish to stir up an emotional political issue in an election year.

The military government of Panama, conducting cool but correct relations with Washington, also has been content most of the time to let the issue lie. It continues to receive U.S. aid. Presumably, it recognizes U.S. reluctance to sign a new canal treaty with a government that was not elected by the Panamanian people.

ON AUG. 6 Panama will have an election which the regime of Brig. Gen. Omar Torrijos Herrera, the country's strongman, has promised will be honest.

It will name 500 so-called "corregidores" representing all of Panama's election district. The corregidores will constitute a constituent assembly to draft a new constitution for a return to civilian government and will name a president and vice president.

It generally is assumed Torrijos will be president.

It is then the lid could come off.

LAST OCT. 11, anniversary of the 1968 coup d'etat that overthrew the 11-day presidency of Dr. Arnulfo Arias, Torrijos told a cheering crowd of 200,000 that the time might come "for one generation to offer its lives" to recover sovereignty over the canal.

Cynics have declared Torrijos needs the canal issue to whip up support for his leadership.

At any rate, it already has been agreed that when a new treaty is signed, it will mark a decline in U.S. authority over the Canal Zone.

Panama wants first of all removal of the "in perpetuity" phrase in any new treaty as a matter of national pride. It wants a definite time limit on the life of the treaty, a status of forces agreement dealing with jurisdiction over U.S. troops similar to one the United States has with Spain, a reduction in the number of U.S. troops in the zone, and a large increase over the $1.9 million it now receives in annual rental.

Panama agrees to U.S. management of the canal and its defenses.

THE UNITED STATES is willing to turn over to Panama certain commercial monopolies it now holds over such operations as piers, movie houses, commissaries, bowling alleys, and perhaps some 30,000 acres of land now included in the zone.

It also is willing to increase the annual rental. Draft treaties completed in 1967 after three years of effort, but never activated, would have given Panama some $25 million annually.

The new treaty will cover not only the present canal but any new one which may be built across Panama.

The United States has indicated it will insist that the treaty extend well beyond the year 2,000.

Rumers Say Only Outsider Can Become Fairfax Police Chief

The scuttlebutt in Fairfax is that Lt. Charles A. Grasso may not be chosen as the city's permanent chief of police.

Grasso, 38, has been acting chief of the Fairfax force since James R. Orr was removed from the city's top police slot last September.

NEARLY EVERYONE agrees that Grasso is qualified for the post. To qualify, council has ruled that a candidate must have logged at least 10 years of police experience in the state, including six years as sergeant or above.

Grasso has been with the Fairfax department for 15 years, and served as a sergeant for 12 years.

The city council has also determined that a prospective chief must have two years of college training or its equivalent, hold an advanced Police Officers Training Certificate and have tallied at least 90 POST educational points.

Grasso has earned two years of College of Marin pre-legal credit, plus two years of college police science and related training. He received his advanced POST certificate in 1966 and has accumulated more than 100 POST educational points.

He holds a vocational teaching certificate and expects to take his bar exam in April.

And he's done an excellent job as acting chief in the aftermath of the Orr affair, according to City Administrator Robert E. Crowe.

But some pressure has been exerted to select an outsider for the post, according to one informed councilman. "There are those who think he should be promoted, but others would like to see him stay where he is," our source says.

What's the rub?

GRASSO'S PROBLEM seems to be that he hasn't chalked up the political points.

"It's true, I'm not a political animal." Grasso admits. "I'm a policeman, and police and politics don't mix."

The city is advertising statewide for top cop applicants, and about a dozen men have expressed an interest so far. The deadline for applications is July 15.

Grasso hasn't applied yet.

"I'm simply too busy doing the job to apply now, but naturally I'll apply before the closing date," the acting chief said.

An oral board, composed of two professional police administrators and one city manager from outside Marin County, will review all applicants and submit recommendations. The decision then lies with the city administrator and the city council.

GRASSO'S FELLOW officers recently petitioned the council to promote the acting chief. "In a department the size of Fairfax there is little enough chance for advancement . . . It is our belief that since the city has a man qualified for the position of police chief, he should then be given the first opportunity for the position," the petitioners wrote.

Grasso missed his first opportunity to become chief 10 years ago, when job specifications were prepared secretly to prevent anyone then a member of the Fairfax force from becoming chief.

Grasso, then 29, didn't meet the minimum age limit of 30 set by the council and City Atty. Wallace S. Myers behind closed doors. Orr was tapped for the post at that time.

Battle lines will again be drawn shortly after July 15. Will the council promote from within the department, or will it again tap an outsider as chief of police?

In the Peyton Place politics of Fairfax, anything can happen.

Those Little Stinkers Went And Took Over The System

WASHINGTON — The Old Democratic pros were sitting in a smoke-filled room No one was smiling.

"Is anyone here going to Miami?"

There was silence.

"I ran for delegate," one pol said, "but I was beaten by a kid who plays drums with a rock group called the 'Meat Grinders.' "

"Huh, I ran for delegate and was beaten by a 19-year-old girl who turned out to be a guy, after the votes were counted."

"I'VE BEEN GOING to Democratic conventions for 30 years, 20 of them as chairman of my delegation," a white-haired pro said. "I've given my all to the party. There isn't a judge in my state who doesn't owe his job to me. There isn't a federal marshal or a postmaster who can't say Big Al wasn't the greatest friend he ever had. When the people wanted roads, they came to me; when they wanted housing, Big Al was there; when they wanted a little something to tide them over, they knew my door was never closed. This time, when it came to choosing a delegate to a convention, what did they do? They elected a black woman jockey."

"Jeez, Al! It's not going to be the same Democratic convention without us."

"What happened to all of us?" a bold, florid man asked. "What happened?"

"I'LL TELL YOU what happened!" a man with a diamond stickpin in his tie shouted. "We did it to ourselves!"

"How's that, Charley?" someone asked.

"Remember when the kids were acting up and raising hell around the country?"

"Who doesn't?"

"Remember what we told them? We told them instead of demonstrating in the streets and closing down the schools that they should work within the system."

"That's right," Big Al said. "I remember myself saying this country was so designed that you could get anything you wanted by working within the system."

"WELL, THAT'S WHAT the little stinkers did. They decided to work within the system, and now we're out on our butts."

"But we didn't really mean for them to work within the system," the bald man said. "That was just a figure of speech — like 'Have a nice day' or 'Give my best to your wife.' "

"Of course we didn't mean it," someone else said. "We meant they should work within the system, but do it by working for us."

"Gentlemen," Charley said. "Our biggest mistake was not that we told them to work within the system, but that we never knew what the system was all about. Not one man in this room ever dreamed someone else could use the system as we did — to control the party."

"WELL," SAID one pol, "I think it's a pretty lousy system if anyone can take it over just because he has more votes."

"You're damn right it is," said Big Al. "If I had known what they had on their minds, I would have advised them to go into the streets and have their heads bashed in!"

"The thing to do now," one pol said, "is to change the system so it can't happen again."

"It's too late," said Charley, "they have control of the party, the convention and the system."

"Well," said Big Al, "we can't sit around here blowing cigar smoke at each other. What do we do?"

"THIS IS WHAT we do," Charles said. "We go down to Miami next week and demonstrate."

"We can't even get into the convention hall," a pol protested.

"In the streets, dummy," Charley said, "in the streets."

Novato Road Bids To Open

The California Division of Highways will open bids Aug. 2 in Sacramento for road resurfacing and repair in Marin County.

The work will be done on 2.5 miles in the westbound lanes of Route 37 beginning west of Highway 101 at the Ignacio Wye in Novato and continuing to Atherton Avenue.

A total of $220,000 is available for the project.

$8.75 Million Budget Set For Sonoma State

A 1972-73 operating budget of $8,750,000 has been approved for Sonoma State College along with an additional $2,702,000 for building projects.

The operating budget is based on 4,800 full-time students, carrying an estimated cost per student next fiscal year at $1,823. The budget for this year is $752,687 more than last year's budget of $7,997,313.

The original capital outlay request of $4,841,000 by the State College Board of Trustees was cut to $2,702,000 in budget trimming sessions by both the Legislature and governor's office.

Nore F. Thiesfeld, building and planning coordinator, said $2,245,000 was set aside for drawings and construction of a new classroom-office complex.

Thiesfeld said the building will be a 25,000-square-foot, three-story concrete structure. A complex of connected buildings in redwood and stucco will surround the central building and house the three cluster colleges and the new school of nursing. The development will total 50,000 square feet.

Working drawings for completion of the library were approved at a cost of $307,000. Thiesfeld said that when constructed, the library addition also would house administrative offices.

Construction of an addition to the corporation yard, totaling $150,000, also was included in the capital outlay budget.

Thiesfeld said the major project cut from the budget was $1,150,000 for new roads to form a new entrance to the college on the northside by the campus lakes.

No Aviation Commission Action On Airbase Use

Caught in political crosswinds, the Marin County Aviation Commission last night postponed reconsidering a joint use plan for Hamilton Air Force Base.

With only four of the board's seven members present, the commission sought to avoid the storm that arose after it endorsed a plan by a 3-1 vote last month.

That endorsement drew fire from the City of Novato, which wasn't involved in the planning, and from Supervisor Arnold M. Baptiste, who said it would have committed the county to a course of action still under study by city and county planning staffs.

Chairman William W. Schwartzer presented a revised plan which he said "would appear to be politically feasible and serve the end of joint use."

The revised proposal, like the previous plan, calls for Marin County to lease land at the base for a terminal building and use the existing runway, taxiways, roadway and adjacent parking at a nominal rental to come from revenue derived from airline use.

Operations as previously stated would be limited to 20 takeoffs and 20 landings a day by commercial planes with the expectation that the limit wouldn't be reached for several years.

Under the proposed plan "appropriate provision shall be made for suitable hours of operation, suitable flight paths or arriving and departing aircraft and noise abatements to prevent disturbance to the local community as a result of these operations."

Dropped in revising the plan was the previously approved proposal of an industrial park on 1,600 acres east of the air base. In its place was a comment that joint use would assist the county's economy by providing "support for future suitable development of the area surrounding Hamilton Air Force Base." And Schwartzer said such development would be whatever was sanctioned by local agencies.

Benjamin B. Ostlind, a strong advocate of joint use, urged the commission to vote on the revised plan last night, rather than delay.

Schwartzer said he felt it was more important that all commissioners have a chance to vote on the plan, rather than call the vote with only four present.

Commissioner William A. Gross and Alfred Hansen were absent, and the seat held by Herbert M. Hanson Jr., who resigned, was vacant.

Commissioner David B. Vail said any commission decision on joint use should consider the needs of the county as a whole rather than just the wishes of the City of Novato, which seeks an equal voice with Marin County on approval of plans for joint use, since the base lies within the city.

The commission adjourned until Aug. 1.

Larkspur Council Delays On Two $27,500 Budget Pleas

Two budget controversies continued to haunt the Larkspur City Council last night. Former councilman Vaughn Marker urged the council to build four tennis courts in Piper Park, and City Atty. Robert W. Elliott submitted a letter defending his request for about $27,500 for legal services in 1972-73.

The council put Elliott's request off to a special meeting July 19, and the tennis court decision off to Aug. 2, when a full council is expected to be on hand to complete budget actions. Mayor William G. Fleckles is on vacation this month.

Marker's tennis court request was supported by a petition signed by 324 Larkspur citizens.

"It's strange to me" that the council has suggested axing the $27,500 courts from the proposed $99,650 parks and recreation capital outlay, Marker declared. He said the courts "were in our plans seven years ago" for Piper Park.

College of Marin courts are always overcrowded, he said. "Within the past 10 days, there've been fistfights" over getting to use the courts, he added.

Councilman Joan Sestak questioned the Piper Park tennis court cost at a budget hearing June 21. The council agreed to further study.

Councilman Neil R. Brixon, who has been campaigning to reduce the city's legal expenses, said a closed session under the Ralph M. Brown Act may be needed to resolve Elliott's fee issue "because we may not be able to afford to hire him any more." He suggested that Elliott be asked whether the session may properly be closed, at the start of the Aug. 2 meeting.

In the preliminary budget, Elliott asked $700 a month retainer fee for himself, $300 a month for Asst. City Atty. Peter B. Brekhus and $15,500 for other services and materials during the year. Elliott received $5,400 in retainer fees last year, plus another $5,500 for special services including litigation.

The council has countered Elliott's request with an offer to continue the $5,400 annual retainer, and a proposal for bi-monthly billings for any extra time or litigation work. Elliott wrote that the extras still would bring the 1972-73 cost to about $27,500, according to City Mgr. Kent B. Bathurst.

Several councilmen have complained in recent months that Elliott's associate, Brekhus, was "being trained at our expense" and that the two attorneys did not always know what the other was doing about Larkspur legal problems.

The Larkspur City Council Also:

REDEVELOPMENT — Approved a map designating a "study area" including the Bon Air proposed shopping center and the Golden Gate Bridge District ferry terminal area east of Highway 101; the map was sent to the city planning commission for action under the city's redevelopment agency program.

MAPS — Scheduled a special meeting at 8 p.m. July 19 to act on final details of condominium status for the Nara Gardens development by John Moran, and the final map of Meadowood Subdivision Unit 3. Neither was ready for approval last night.

SEWER — Awarded M.G.M. Construction Co. of Concord, lowest of four bidders, a $36,780 contract to construct a 800-foot sewer trunk line in connection with the Doherty Drive project. The engineer's estimate had been $30,000 for the job.

LANDSCAPING — Ordered bids on an estimated $17,942 worth of landscaping for islands in Magnolia Avenue at Bon Air Road and at Doherty Drive, plus areas on Dartmouth Drive. State road funds are available for the work.

Corte Madera Councilmen Cool To Town Meeting

A proposal for a town meeting in Corte Madera got a lukewarm reception from some of the town's councilmen last night. (Another Corte Madera Town Council story, page 1.)

Mayor Holmes S. (Pete) Norville said elected officials tend to be thrown on the defensive at such affairs — "you can't blame a guy for staying away from somewhere he's going to get brickbats thrown at him."

Norville, threatened with recall, was backed by Councilman Harold B. Wagstaff, who said, "I've lived through five San Anselmo town meetings and in their pure form they have the possibility of getting away and becoming a sounding board for people bent on changing the status quo."

The news of a town meeting was given by Mrs. Edward F. Pierce. She said an ad hoc committee had scheduled an organizational meeting for 7:30 p.m. July 20 at San Clemente School's general purpose room, and wanted the council's participation.

The meeting would explore the concerns of all residents in a workshop format; it would be an educational forum.

Councilman Edward W. Colthurst said Larkspur and San Anselmo's town meetings had turned into political groups — "they degenerated into anties-tablishment meetings."

And Councilman Herber C. Leney said the council had formerly relied on improvements and homeowner associations to give them input on residents' wishes.

Councilman Robert Flahive told Mrs. Pierce he saw a need for communication — "we have a lot to gain."

After considerable comment from the audience — the majority of whom supported the idea of a town meeting — councilmen offered their assistance to the ad hoc committee.

The Corte Madera Town Council Also:

POLICE CARS — Declared three police cars and two non-commercial gasoline pumps surplus and authorized their disposal.

BUS ROUTES — Approved rerouting of the Intra County bus service No. 88 to go right on Madera Boulevard and Tamal Vista Avenue, traveling Madera, Tamal Vista Boulevard and Lucky Drive to eliminate the present loop around the Lakeside Meadowood block; approved seven no-parking "bus stop" zones on Madera Blvd. Begin to check patterns of heavy traffic on residential areas of Tamal Vista.

HOUSING ELEMENT — Set Sept. 18 at 8 p.m. for a public hearing on the inclusion of the housing element in the general plan.

ABANDONMENT — Set July 17 at 8 p.m. for a public hearing on intention to abandon a 16-foot wide slope easement on Marion Avenue, created by freeway development, and thereby a lot to be developed as a restaurant.

REDEVELOPMENT — Approved hiring consultants Allegast and Newton for a maximum of $300 to plan relocation of playground and other facilities in the park.

LIBRARY — Appointed Johanna Lewis to another three year term on the Larkspur Library Board.

GRADING — Introduced an ordinance requiring planning commission approval for any excavation involving more than 1,000 cubic yards, and tightening other requirements.

TREES — Adopted an ordinance establishing rules for preservation of heritage trees on private property. No one in the audience had any comments pro or con.

LICENSE FEES — Introduced the long-discussed ordinance establishing a $5 per unit fee for residential developments, trailer parking spaces and the like.

EMPLOYEES — Postponed to Aug. 2, a hearing on a proposed city employee relations resolution, modeled on the League of California Cities draft.

OBITUARY — In tribute to John C. Oglesby, onetime Larkspur city engineer and county surveyor, who died Thursday.

SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL

Kasia And Her Costumes

By JOAN LISETOR

There's very little glamor, but Marin Shakespeare Festival costume designer Kasia Stefanek loves it. It doesn't pay much, and the accommodations leave a lot to be desired — working in makeshift quonset huts, dust swirling through the air, the hot sun beating down.

And it's a far cry from where Kasia spent last summer, on location in Carefree, Ariz., designing costumes for Eva Marie Saint's latest movie and meeting the other stars — Bob Hope and Chief Dan George — of the soon-to-be released movie.

Kasia is spending the summer at Forest Meadows in San Rafael designing more than 200 costumes needed for the festival productions of "Twelfth Night," "Romeo and Juliet" and the musical, "The Wizard of Oz."

An art teacher at Santa Barbara High School, Kasia started a costume design department at the high school in 1969 and now teaches two classes in design.

THE FIRST show for which she designed costumes was "Romeo and Juliet," when it was presented in Santa Barbara in 1969.

"We have professional actors and a professional director who work with the high school students and the community to put on what we call the pro-am shows," she said.

She met Eva Marie Saint last year when the actress appeared in the pro-am production of "Winesburg, Ohio," which was entirely costumed in the 1904 era by Kasia.

"Eva and I got along so well she said she was going to request me as her costume designer for all of her movies, and, true to her word, two months later she called and asked me to design for the movie she was going to make," Kasia said.

A native of Tampa, Fla., Kasia came to California with her family when she was 14. She graduated from the University of California at Santa Barbara with a major in art and a minor in drama and began teaching art in 1962.

She said she had no intention of making a career of designing costumes.

"Out of necessity I made all of my clothes from the time I was 16," she said, "but when I was in junior high school I was kicked out of a home economics class because my sewing was so bad."

She now makes her own clothes only when she has the time, she said.

"I NEVER can find dressy clothes that I like so I make most of them," she said.

When Kasia is going to costume a play, she reads it and researches the period or country.

"First, in my mind I create a visual image of the total picture; then I see the individual characters. I visua lize eacl character with some other identification, such as a bird or a flower," Kasia said.

She likes to meet the actor who will play the role before she designs the costume so it will be suited to his personality. The director's concept is important, too, she added.

Working as Kasia's assistant is Colleen Knapp, also of Santa Barbara, a former student of Kasia, "and my left hand," according to the designer, who is left-handed.

Kasia also has between eight and 10 high school students, participating in the festival's high school workshop who help her with cutting, sewing, alterations and fittings. Some work on macrame trim while others bead by hand.

IT'S A long day at Forest Meadows for the designer, who usually arrives around 9:30 a.m. She passes out assignments to her staff and then sets out in search of an electrical outlet or bargains with another department for equipment before she can begin her work. No two days are the same, she said.

Usually around 6 or 7 p.m. she leaves for dinner and then returns to work for a few hours.

Always in search of equipment, Kasia said there is a critical need for old carpeting, wooden hangers, old costume jewelry, plumes, tapestry fabrics, wide belts and mirrors. They can be brought to Forest Meadow, located at the Dominican College campus.

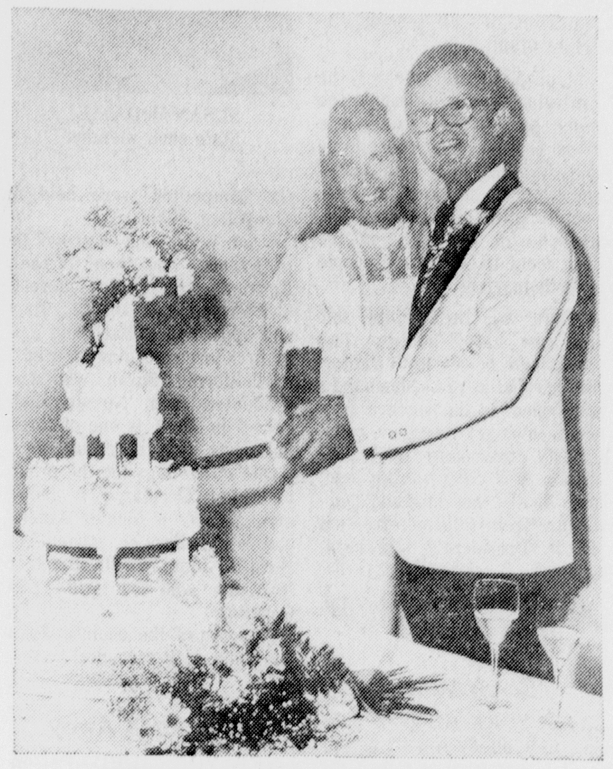

For persons interested in seeing her costumes, Kasia said she would arrange a tour. She can be reached through the festival office.

WORKING ON a makeshift table outside the quonset hut where costumes and equipment are stored, Marin Shakespeare Festival costume designer Kasia Stefanek is surrounded by costumes she has designed for festival productions.

MARIN SHAKESPEARE Festival costume designer Kasia Stefanek pins ribbons on the costume she has designed for Malvolio in "Twelfth Night," while her assistant and former student at Santa Barbara High School, Colleen Knapp, sews beading on a tunic to be worn by the actor playing Sir Andrew.

Crash Diet Called 'Yo-Yo Syndrome'

Describing the crash diet where weight is lost then put back on in a short time as the "Yo-yo syndrome", Dr. Neil Solomon, assistant professor of Psychiatry and Behaviorial Science at Johns Hopkins Hospital and School of Medicine, and Maryland's Secretary of Health and Mental Hygiene warns that protein from vital organs is lost by fad dieting.

The dieter should be losing pure fat not protein, and for this desired weight loss a balanced diet including fruits, vegetables, dairy products, meat, fish, poultry and cereal products is recommended by Dr. Solomon.

PARENT AND CHILD

Teach The Infant Early, Then No Bedtime Fussing

By CYNTHIA PARSONS
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

Any child can be taught to go to bed without an argument.

When very young, babies spend more time asleep than awake. Mothers should be sure these little ones have had enough to eat and sufficientplay before expecting them to go back to sleep.

But when mother is sure it is time for a baby to sleep, the injunction "night night" should be followed by a firm conviction to let nothing but an emergency get the child up again.

Some babies require more sleep than others; some need to be quieted down after a play time before they are ready for sleep. An alert mother will try to gauge the need of her baby accurately. Then when she puts the baby down for a nap, she can leave the room with confidence.

BUT SUPPOSE you have a young child who resists going to bed. The solution is not to avoid the argument and let the child play and fuss until he falls asleep. This is the method neglected children must use to regulate themselves. Mothers and fathers should provide a more intelligent solution.

In the case of preschoolers, it's important to learn what best prepares your child for bed. You need to know whether singing stimulates or soothes; whether storytelling excites or quiets; whether punishment delayed until the next morning has any effect. If it's an active little boy or girl who tends to get noisy and silly as bedtime approaches, then you need to be ready with a favorite game that is quiet and requires little physical action. In other words, don't let Dad wrestle with the child between the good-night kiss and the request to "get into bed."

It's often good to establish a routine — one that you, not the child, set. Follow this routine until going to bed when told is a natural activity. No last drink of water after the "last" drink has already been given.

It's also well not to expect a child to settle down just after eating a late snack. The food may be as stimulating as rough-housing. Instead, establish a routine for prebedtime. If you can't give some time to singing or reading or storytelling or playing a quiet game, then encourage the child to sing or play or read quietly to himself.

Dad Might Be Pushing College For Either Of Two Reasons

HELEN AND SUE:

Dad wants me to finish college mainly because he didn't. He did all right without a degree. He has his own machine shop and garage but still thinks of himself as a "laborer" and doesn't want this for me.

I tried college, but spent most of my time in the auto mechanics shop. I'm good with my hands — I ought to be, as I've worked with Pop ever since I could lift a wrench.

What I want is to come into the business with him and help him expand it. He thinks I'm just saying that to make him feel good: how could any guy not want to go to college if he got a chance? Hell, he likes what HE's doing, and "labor" earns him more per year than I could make as a college professor! I like what he's doing too.

How do you get through to your father that you want to follow in his footsteps when he wants you to be an executive or professional man? — NOT ON THE BRAIN TRAIN

DEAR NOT:

Your father may be pushing college for two reasons: 1. To provide you choices — just in case you "outgrow" the family business, and 2. The old upward mobility thing: from mechanic's son to white collar executive. . .what parent doesn't want for his child what he could never have for himself?

Why not take a year away from college, work in the machine shop with him, and then make your decision? By that time you'll either have made it in a partnership or have learned that Pop wasn't just blowin' into an exhaust pipe. — HELEN

N.O.T.B.T.:

It's no good, going to college just for status. Tell your father you'll get a better education working with HIM at something you enjoy.

Here's an argument you might use on him.

Research shows that only one of every four college students gets a degree. There are twice as many suicides among college students as among the general population — and they have 50 per cent more emotional and mental problems. College grades have little or no bearing on later success, and presently a lot of teachers and engineers with Master's Degrees can't find jobs. In fact, blue collar workers are doing better than the white collars.

If a student invested wisely the costs of four years in college, he might have larger life earnings than if he attended.

Judging from all this, a student at Michigan State University concluded, "By attending college, a young person has a better chance of: becoming a dropout, going crazy, killing himself, learning irrelevant things, and losing money." — SUE

DEAR RAP:

I chewed my fingernails until I started chewing my pencils instead. That helped my nails grow, but now I'm called "Pencil Eater," and even the teachers tease me so much I dread to go back to school thi September. I'm very shy. Can you suggest a habit that isn't so noticeable? — If I switch to chewing food I'll get fat. — GOTTA CHANGE

DEAR GOTTA:

Exchanging one habit for another doesn't cure the nerves that cause the habit. Try to make new friends this summer and keep busy at things you truly enjoy. When you conquer some of your shyness (you can, if you remember others feel self-conscious, too) you may also lose the urge to chew. — HELEN AND SUE

Martha: The Fallen Star Of The Republican Party

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The telephone was both Martha Mitchell's trademark and her undoing as a superstar in a Republican administration with few glittering personalities.

She was outspoken on topics from the Vietnam war to the Republicans to the Democrats to her husbend.

She said the unthinkable in a town where discretion and protocol act as effective gags for most people.

"The Vietnam war is over" was one of her shockers.

AS THE WIFE of one Cabinet member, she said of another: "We're thinking of running (Treasury Secretary) John B. Connally for Pope."

"Right on Martha! Give 'em Hell," President Nixon used to say when the wife of his attorney general, John N. Mitchell, teed off on the Democrats.

Now, three years after her spectacular rise to becoming the most sought after woman in Washington, she and her husband are preparing for an eventual move back to New York and away from the limelight. Mitchell, who resigned as attorney general to manage President Nixon's reelection campaign, has quit the latter post at his wife's insistence. He will remain as an adviser but it seems certain that he and his wife will not command the same attention in Washington which was sometimes aghast and often amused by Mrs. Mitchell's frankness.

Mrs. Mitchell, 53, burst into prominence early in 1969, when she told an interviewer that anti-Vietnam war demonstrators looked like "Russian revolutionaries." She made a 2 a.m. phone call to the Arkansas Gazette to blast Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., a leading critic of the war.

Martha had the nerve to say what she thought and called the shots as she saw them, sometimes outrageously.

President Nixon was amused. He felt she added a touch of liveliness, even glamor to the staid stamp of his administration. She fell into a class with Henry A. Kissinger as a Nixon-style celebrity.

MAIL SHOWERED into her letterbox and she developed a country wide-following. Some of her detractors starting called her "Moutha."

The wives of other Cabinet members who were under strong restraints, neither understood nor liked Martha's power.

Mrs. Nixon and her daughters, Julie Eisenhower and Tricia Cox, defended her right to speak, but idd not approve of some of her fiery opinions. Although their husbands were close, Mrs. Nixon and Mrs. Mitchell maintained a cool and detached relationship, although they spent many social hours together.

With her dimpled smile and vivacity, Martha's pictures easily made the front pages and the lead spots on the social pages.

She began to feel her opinions, by now receiving wide attention, were worth something, as indeed they were.

She angered some of the senatorial wives when she personally attempted to lobby them on the telephone while their husbands were adamantly opposing such proposals as the President's nomination of Florida Judge G. Harrold Carswell for the Supreme Court. It was a breach of protocol on her part.

MARTHA HAD been a happy "country club" wife in Rye, N.Y. before moving to Washington. Her husband headed an illustrious Wall Street law firm before merging it with Nixon's law partnership.

The Mitchells, both divorced from previous marriages, have one child, daughter Marty, 11, who is adored by both. Martha was a Pine Bluff, Ark. belle who attended Catholic schools. Although she was not a Catholic, her friends dubbed her "Saint Martha."

She sends her daughter Marty to a Catholic school and worries about her safety now that both parents are public figures. Along with the fan letters came "hate" mail.

When her husband was in the Justice Department, she was assigned an FBI agent for protection.

When she appeared to be losing her White House stamp of approval as the days slipped by she maintained her "love affair" with the press.

There were indications that she was barred from the "Spirit of '76," the presidential plane, after she wandered to the rear where reporters were seated during a presidential trip. Under questioning, she told the press corps, "The Vietnam war stinks and it's all Senetor Fulbright's fault."

Mrs. Mitchell enjoyed the limlight. Some thought too much so. But she was a gracious hostess, kind, hospitable and thoughtful. She went out of her way to be kind to little people with big causes. She worked, for example, on the drug scene to help young people save themselves.

There was little doubt, too, that she hated politics. Two weeks ago, on a trip to California, her dislike of her husband's job boiled to the surface in a series of angry telephone calls, a hasty crosscountry flight, seclusion in a country club hotel and, finally, her husband's departure from fulltime direction of the President's 1972 campaign.

Scrub Well

NEW YORK (UPI)—Scrubbing well all over with brown laundry soap such as Fels Naptha still is recommended when one comes down with poison ivy or poison oak. Let the air dry you. Do not use a towel. For best results, after the good scrubbing, leave a layer of lather all over.

Better Keep Away

NEW YORK (UPI)—Poison ivy and poison oak can best be avoided by keeping away from plants of same. Know how to identify the pesky plants. Boy Scout and Girl Scout handbooks contain good sketches to help you.

Teen-Age Girls Using More Makeup

NEW YORK (UPI)—Add to contemporary paradoxes: The "natural look" is causing teen-age girls to use more cosmetics than ever before. Lester Rand, president of the Rand Youth Poll, reporting this, said:

"In our interviews.. with teen-age girls throughout the United States we have found an unusual upsurge in the use of...facial cleansers, foundation and blush. Many girls say these are necessary to achieve a natural, outdoors, healthy look."

EAGLE FLIES IN LARKSPUR

A crepe paper Eagle, the product of hours of work by members of Boy Scout Troop 43 of Larkspur, now perches atop a garage at 25 Piedmont Avenue. The boys didn't want to throw the eagle away after it was entered in the Larkspur-Corte Madera Fourth of July parade, and so a home was found for it atop the garage at the home of Scout Mitch Amundsen. "I guess it'll stay there until we find a way to get it down," Mitch's mother said. (Independent-Journal photo)

Robbers Get $3,000 At Kentfield Service Station

A Kentfield service station was robbed of more than $3,000 in equipment and $100 cash Sunday or Monday, sheriff's deputies said yesterday.

The burglars removed louvered windows to gain entry to the Chevron station at 810 College Avenue and took a 300-pound toll box and its contents valued at at least $3,000, a trading stamp machine worth $65 and a $190 adding machine as well as the cash, according to deputies.

Four Youths Testify During Drug Hearings

MIAMI (UPI)—Four teenagers told a congressional committee how it is today—as high as 80 per cent of their high school friends are on drugs, and most of them have turned to crime to support their habits.

Three blonde, blue-eyed girls, whose dissipated eyes belied their choir girl looks, and a handsome boy were the leadoff witnesses at the second day of hearings on drug abuse in schools. Rep. Claude Pepper's Select House Committee on Crime is conducting the sessions.

All four youths told the congressmen and a hushed crowd of 200 students and adults at North Miami Beach High School that they were participating in "The Seed," a drug rehabilitation program for school-age children in nearby Fort Lauderdale.

Ann Ryser, 14, told the congressmen she started "stealing booze from the house" when she was 11 and quickly progressed to marijuana, which she purchased at school. She later progressed through a long list of drugs and finally became addicted to heroin.

"I went to school vany days stoned," she said. "I did crimes all the time. I would steal from stores like it was nothing.

"We stole cars, took them to the airport and stripped them of all they had that we could sell to buy drugs," she testified.

Larry Pellegrini told the committee he began using marijuana at the age of 13 and from there experimented with other drugs and became addicted to heroin.

Pellegrini, now 18, said he turned to crime to support his drug habits, including armed robbery which led to his arrest on various charges at least six times.

"I stole constantly," he said. "I broke into cars and homes, then went to armed robbery."

Pellegrini said he committed 12 or 14 armed robberies, mostly at convenience stores, "and the most we ever got was just over $700. We bought dope with it."

The other two youths told similar stories to Pepper's committee, which opened three days of hearings here Wednesday in an all-black junior high school in the heart of a Miami ghetto.

At Wednesday's hearings, a research analyst and medical examiner told of a rapid growth of drug abuse in Dade County.

Beban Calls Majority Prison Study 'Failure'

Grand Juror Richard W. Beban, who never did see eye to eye with the rest of the 1971-72 Marin Grand Jury, yesterday issued his minority opinion on San Quentin, calling the majority report a "dismal failure."

It was the first unsanctioned report by a grand juror in the memory of county officials.

Beban on the one hand, accused the grand jury of failing to investigate properly the "critical" situation at the prison that "has escalated to a state of guerrilla warfare."

But on the other hand, the 24-year-old freelance writer said the jury couldn't conduct an adequate investigation even if it wanted to.

"The grand jury has been virtually powerless to conduct an adequate investigation into this area," he wrote. "Having the authority to investigate is one thing, having the power to do it thoroughly, with the confidence that recommendations will be carried out, is another."

The jury's criminal justice committee, criticizing the lockup of the prison's most difficult inmates for a seven-month stretch, recommended that all inmates be permitted one hour of outdoor exercise each day.

Beban went much further, recommending seven major changes in the penal system.

He favored eliminating large prisons and the indeterminate sentence, trimming "victimless crime" from the lawbooks, repaying victims of crime from the state coffers, greatly increasing staff, paying inmate laborers at outside wage scales and trying to handle almost all criminals in their home communities.

Beban was on the criminal justice committee until he was stripped of all committee duties for conducting an independent investigation.

In his report, he suggested relieving the grand jury of its duty to investigate prisons and recommended filling the gap with a prison ombudsman to investigate complaints about San Quentin.(The prison created such a post last week and appointed Associate Warden James W. L. Park.) Beban said the jury investigations have been a failure because the jury can't cope with an organization as large and powerful as the department of corrections. Even if it could, its dual role as investigator and prosecutor gets in the way, according to Beban.

"This grand jury was faced with that contradiction during its term in office, and chose to abrogate its investigative independence in favor of functioning as a prosecutive arm."

He said the jury declined to investigate the violence last August that claimed the lives of three inmates and three guards for fear of "interfering with any possible indictments that might be requested at a later date by the district attorney."

He said that in two other major cases which he did not name the jury declined to investigate despite the serious situation at the prison.

He said war is under way at the prison as inmates battle for basic rights like exercise and medical care while guards lobby for the return of the death penalty.

"Both groups see the taking of human life as a necessary part of their survival or personal liberation," he said.

He blamed the situation inside on the "apathy and ignorance" of those outside and said no change will occur in the prison until massive changes take place in society.

"Until econmic, racial, political and social injustices are eradicated, prisons will not change," he said.

The statement was the final instance of Beban bucking the jury. In addition to his differences with the committee, Beban has refused to turn in his copy of a report on the Sausalito police leaked to the press and declined to take part in the final sessions of the jury.

He labeled his statement an opinion rather than a report because, he said, the jury stifled the dissent of its members by requiring that minority reports receive approval of a majority of the jury.

Litter Punishment

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI)— A law proposed Wednesday by the Louisiana House would allow judges to punish persons who throw trash on state highways by making them clean up all refuse along a stretch of highway as designated by the judge. The Senate has already passed a similar bill.

'Girls Legislature' Approves Prostitution

SQUAW VALLEY, Calif. (UPI)—The California Girls State mock legislature Wednesday approved a "bill" legalizing prostitution.

Gov. Sandra Dorsey, 17, of Sacramento, signed the measure in the closing session of the week-long mock session. The meeting was attended by 540 high school juniors from throughout the state.

The proposal calls for legalized prostitution with licensing and medical supervision.

Other bills approved by the girls were ones abolishing the winner-take-all primary system, requiring ethnic studies in secondary schools and allowing women to use Miss, Mrs. or Ms. on legal documents.

Six Wounded By Sniper's Gun Fire

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) —Four policemen, a fireman and a security guard were wounded by sniper fire late last night in a confrontation with an angry crowd of black youths who gathered around a firebombed store.

Police said the confrontation lasted nearly two hours, and one man was arrested during the incident, which officers said escalated from a misunderstanding between a white convenience store manager and a black youth in the city's southeast section.

The six men wounded by blasts from a sniper's shotgun were treated and released at area hospitals. None was seriously hurt and officials say police on the scene did not return the sniper fire.

Jim Crow Laws In Louisiana Repealed

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards signed a bill Wednesday repealing state laws that had made it illegal for persons of different races to use the same rest rooms, ride on buses together or socialize.

The old "Jim Crow" laws were not enforced since the Supreme Court declared them unconstitutional during the 1950s and 1960s, but they were still on the books.

Rep. Dorothy May Taylor of New Orleans, the first black woman to serve in the Louisiana Legislature since Reconstruction, attended the signing ceremony.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Alcohol A Problem Even Among New Hebrides Islands Natives

Alcohol is a problem in the New Hebrides Islands inhabited by about 75,000 Melanesians and ruled by a French and British condominium. In the past, kava was drunk as part of strict custom rituals. But since liquor became freely available, crimes related to booze have jumped, especially among young male offenders.

Before 1962, it was illegal to sell liquor to the natives. Under a new law, beer could be purchased through government-licensed cooperative stores. Imbibing is at its heaviest after paydays and on weekends, when groups of men gather to share a carton of beer.

UNRESTRICTED drinking has been possible for eight years and the only consequences have been drunkenness and the effects on the family of the alcoholic. In time, the physical and mental effects will come to the fore.

The punishment dealt out by the French and British courts for excessive drinking is not adquate for these people (the same applies in the country). Traditional punishments, such as killing pigs and offering them to wronged parties, are more meaningful to the New Hebrideans. In social terms, it involves shame which hurts the drunkard more than the paying of a fine of $6 to $10 or spending a week in jail. Apparently, European modes of punishment are not as effective as tradional methods because the number of repeaters is on the increase.

ALCOHOL is one of our oldest drugs and almost every culture since the beginning of man has been able to find ways to make it through fermentation. It was used by the natives for special tribal functions and celebrations. Booze became a curse when man found that if he drank enough of it, he could escape reality.

MISBEHAVING KNEES

D.C. writes: What can be done about knees that won't behave? In sitting down, I just drop into a chair. To get up, I have to put my hands on both chair arms and push up. Getting on and off buses and going up and down stairs I have to pull myself up by grasping the rails on both sides.

REPLY

You need a thorough checkup because weakness of the leg muscles is a more likely cause. Remedies are available, but you must act without delay. If there is no neurological cause, exercising the legs may strengthen the muscles that hold the knee in place.

TEMPERATURE VARIATIONS

J. L. J. writes: What would cause a lifelong fever? It started in childhood.

REPLY

Body temperature varies from one individual to another much the same way as the pulse, the amount of perspriation and body functions. A few persons always run hotter or colder than average. In this respect, the slight elevation in temperature is not fever.

COMBS SHOULD BE CLEAN

A. B. writes: My hairdresser says that germs do not stick to a metal comb, therefore it does not have to be sterilized. Is this true?

REPLY

No. Germs adhere to everything and beauticians should keep combs and hairbrushes clean to avoid ringworm, nits, and other organisms that are much larger in size than germs.

SINUS DRAINAGE

L. G. writes: Could lung disease develop from drainage of an infected sinus?

REPLY

It is logical to believe the lung infection stems from the sinus discharge that seeps down the back of the throat. But this material, like saliva, usally is swallowed. The lung condition generally stems from the same infection or irritation that involves the sinuses. Irritation from smoking is another example.

PRESSURE SORE

C.L. writes: What can be done about a sore on the ear caused by using a hearing aid?

REPLY

Consult your physician first to make certain the sore comes from irritation. If so, it may be necessary to go without the aid until healing occurs or get a new earpiece that fits without rubbing.

STEAM BATHS

A reader writes: Do steam baths have any health value?

REPLY

No, other than cleaning out the pores and making the sweat glands work harder. An ordinary hot bath or shower does the same. They are not recommended for persons with hypertension, heart trouble, or poor circulation.

BABY BITE

R. C. writes: If an infant bites another child on the arm is it dangerous? The teeth did not penetrate the skin.

REPLY

No. The skin must be penetrated by the teeth to cause infaction.

DILATED PUPILS

J. C. writes: Why is it that the pupils in my eyes and in my son's eyes get very big at night?

REPLY

Enlargement of the pupils occurs when it gets dark to allow more light to enter the eyes.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Unusual Hold-Up Action From This Hand — A Sacrifice Trick

The hold-up is basically a simple play. You have a sure trick in the opponent's suit, but you refuse to take it at your first opportunity. Sometimes you refuse the trick twice before taking it. The point is that you do eventually take the trick. In some hold-up plays, however, you have to give up the trick altogether.

MOMENT OF DECISION

West leads the jack of spades, and your moment of decision is upon you at once. Instinct tells you to take the queen of spades and salt that trick away while there is still salt in the house. Prudence prods you in the other direction.

Which do you follow — instinct or prudence? Before you answer, consider where the king of clubs may be lurking.

It would be wonderful to take the first trick with the queen of spades if you could depend on West to hold the king of clubs. With a successful club finesse you could even afford to try a diamond finesse. You would take at least 11 tricks.

PESSIMISTIC VIEW

Now take a pessimistic view. The club finesse may lose. If so, East will lead a spade through you —and West will defeat the contract with the rest of the spades.

What can you do to protect yourself against this sad fate? Give up the queen of spades. Play a low spade from both hands at the first trick!

SAVES THE GAME

Since East starts with only two spades, this unusual hold-up play saves the game. West may lead another low spade, or he may take the ace of spades first. Either way, East cannot lead a spade when he gets his king of clubs. The best he can do is to return a diamond, but you will refuse that finesse in order to take your nine tricks.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one spade, and the next player passes. You hold:
♠ Q 2
♥ K 10 5
♦ 7 4 2
♣ A 10 9 6 5.
What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one no-trump. Your hand is not strong enough for a response of two clubs. No other suit bid is worth considering, but the hand calls for a response of some sort. One no-trump is the only remaining possibility.

Photographers Display California 'Generosity'

By LAURA DEVENDORF

California is generous toward photographers who seek purity and grandeur in her wilderness. Just how generous is witnessed through work by Jan Debye and Steven Dunham being shown through July at the newly opened Focal Plane Gallery, 1214 San Anselmo Avenue, San Anselmo.

Debye's approach is pure Ansel Adams. His subjects, lighting and his eye for natural dramatic arrangements are so perfect as to seem almost unreal. Geographically, his photographs reach the range of the state, from the startling streaks of a Sierra waterfall plunging before black rocks and icicle-encrusted brush, to rocks jutting mountain-like through Point Lobos's fog and sea.

Wide meadows spread beneath black masses of hills and the spiked, distant Sierra range. Back-lit clouds hover over and darken snow-bright mountains. An abandoned movie set crumbles and gives way to an encroaching tangle of weeds.

These are the rare and magic moments, lighted by unusual and unrepeatable conditions into scenes of total and often shattering beauty. They embody that awesome sense of being the only one to experience a perfect, ephemeral moment which no other eyes can ever see again. And that would be true had not the camera stilled and recorded it.

So beyond appreciating Debye for photographing these moments for all to share, he should be appreciated for the dedicated patience he must have needed in waiting for them.

Dunham also involves himself with the California countryside. His round white moon hangs like an ornament in a night gray sky, which is broken only by the rhythmic silhouettes of redwoods. And this scene has the same pure drama seen in Debye's work.

By comparison, the rest of Dunham's portfolio seems a notch or so less inspired, often a little flat, a little lifeless or a little too inclusive.

Dunham concentrates heavily on trees. There are redwood trunks deep in foliage, gnarled and naked trees, felled trees, trees living, grown tired and dying, their limbs breaking and rotting amid the lushness. The show's only color photograph is the final stage, with trees now lengths of driftwood.

He surprises grazing sheep, looking like so many fat, round rocks along the hill curve. He sights birds rising against factory smoke.

And while all of these are attractive, only Dunham's moon-hung forest shares the power of Debye's lost world aura. Which only proves that there are degrees of purity in the purist approach to photography as well as in anything else.

Bagley Fund Bill To Save Bay Passed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The Assembly yesterday passed an appropriation bill which Assemblyman William Bagley, R-San Rafael, called "the most important Bay Area conservation legislation that has come before you this year."

Bagley's bill would appropriate $300,000 for use by the State Lands Commission in defending itself in a lawsuit brought by Westbay Associates, a large landowner in the South San Francisco Bay Area.

In its suit, the firm claims title to about 10,000 acres in the southern part of the bay. Bagley said the suit jeopardizes a 100-year-old public trust under which the state controls a total of 80,000 acres in San Francisco Bay.

The Assembly voted 70-0 to send the bill to the Senate.

If Westbay Associates wins its case, Bagley said, public access will be blocked to about 27 miles of the bay with a value of about $120 million.

"Much environmentally unique land will be lost to the public forever," Bagley said. "If California should lose the Westbay litigation, 65 per cent of San Francisco Bay could be subject to filling and private development. The South Bay would be reduced to a narrow band of tidewaters with little ecological value."

The Bay Conservation and Development Commission would be crippled by loss of jurisdiction and purchase of a South Bay Wildlife Refuge would become impossible, if the case were lost, Bagley added.

The money, Bagley said, would be spent for title reports and for other research necessary for the development/of a defense.

$417,000 Belvedere Budget Plan Shows 20-Cent Tax Increase

The Belvedere City Council has received a preliminary operating budget for 1972-1973 of more than $417,000, up $61,000 over last fiscal year.

The spending program, proposed by City Mgr. William L. Cavalli, would increase the general operating tax rate by 20 cents per $100 assessed valuation to $1.55.

The council has yet to receive the second part of Cavalli's two-part budget presentation: a capital outlay program of about $149,000.

Cavalli told the Independent-Journal, however, he hopes to cut the sum to $100,000 in order to chop the capital outlay portion of the city's overall tax rate from 35 cents to 25 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

The combined general operating and capital outlay budgets would carry a tax rate of approximately $1.80, or 10 cents more than in 1971-1972.

The oeprating budget originally included salary increases for city employees ranging from about 2 to 5.7 per cent, although the council on Monday night tentatively awarded 5 per cent boosts.

The council's action added $3,400 to the spending program. Also included in the budget is a $39,000 increase in the city's sewer account, $21,000 of which will cover Belvedere's share of Tiburon Sanitary District's new contract to provide sewage treatment through an innovative algae formation process.

Also, $9,000 has been added to the sewer account to cover service miscalculations in last year's budget, according to Cavalli.

The remaining $8,000 of the sewer account's increase will cover escalating salaries and operating expenses, he said.

The budget also includes, in new expenditures, $3,000 for planning assistant Robert Switzer and related expenses; $1,200 to cover office expenses of the city attorney, and $4,750 for improvements and repairs to the park and playground.

In two budget sessions to date, the council's only change has been the 5 per cent across-the-board salary hikes.

The council will hold another budget session at its regular meeting at 7:30 p.m. today in the community center.

Budgets for other city departments, with last year's figures in parenthesis, are as follows:

Legislative $11,500 ($6,450); administrative $37,360 ($34,016); general offices $8,300 ($7,150); debt service $46,000 ($43,740); insurance and bonds $19,565 ($16,720); general $3,270 ($3,350); retirement $21,540 ($20,001); police department $91,272 ($89,035); fire department $16,600 ($14,975); building $4,880 ($4,600); animal control $1,500 ($1,500); sewers $83,850 ($44,900); streets and lanes $43,150 ($43,075); corporation yard $10,751 ($9,301); parks $10,300 ($8,300); recreation $3,500 ($750); miscellaneous $6,480 ($6,300).

Reedlands Cluster Housing Proposal Is Turned Down

The Tiburon Planning Commission last night turned down an elaborate proposal to develop 148 units of clustered housing on a 30-acre parcel in the Reedlands area.

This was the second time around for the developers, Security Capital Corp. They had requested a prezoning hearing in January on a similar proposal but had withdrawn it before the board could act.

The 30-acre parcel at Cecelia Way and Cayford Drive is on county land zoned for single-family dwellings. Most of the people at the spirited public hearing wanted it kept that way.

Last night's action by the board was actually a policy statement requested by Marin County's planning commission, which will hold its own hearing July 24 on the proposed high-density residential development.

The project unveiled last night by San Francisco architect Robert L. Goetz showed 17 more units than the one proposed in January.

According to Goetz, his design was a better one since it considered the character of the various Tiburon neighborhoods it adjoined. The proposed dwellings varied from expensive single-family homes to moderately-priced attached clusters.

Goetz said cluster construction would preserve open space on the now-vacant hillside.

His proposal fell on deaf ears. The planning commission listened to a string of protests from neighbors of the proposed development. They included Edward R. Middendorf, president of the Reedlands Property Owners Association.

He cited fear of increased traffic on Reed Ranch Road and loss of what would become permanent open space. "It's entirely out of keeping with the area," he said. "Any development on this ridge would be taking something away from nearby property areas."

Board members endorsed the concept of clustered housing, but thought Security Capital's development had too many units and was in the wrong location. "This project isn't meeting legitimate social needs as proposed, and doesn't provide protection for existing landowners," commissioner Jacqueline Parnell said.

There were six votes against the proposal and an abstention by Chairman Victor C. Banks, who said it was up to the county planning commission to make decisions about county land.

Developer Marco A. Radomile of Tiburon had better luck last night on his request for a rezoning. The board unanimously rezoned a 3.7-acre parcel on Round Hill Road to allow for a cluster of eight single-family houses designed by architect Raphael S. Soriano.

According to the Tiburon resident, his arrangement would save 50 mature oaks on the property and allow "plenty of breathing space."

The Tiburon Planning Commission also:

LANDSCAPING — Heard Barbara Meislin, a resident engaged in a survey of the city's landscaping needs, ask for a "radical change" in the city's commitment to landscaping. Board members invited her to join work sessions.

SUBDIVISION — Approved a tentative map for the Mount Tiburon subdivision, including the shifting of a view site to adjacent Marin Municipal Water District land.

RED HILL — Saw preliminary plans for proposed housing on Red Hill by representatives of Knorr-Elliot Associates, architects for developer Leonard Cahn. Despite contention of architect William G. Schram that the proposal would save a chronic slide area, commissioners wanted to see additional results of soil testing on the slope. No action taken.

Deserter Check Booking Made

Mill Valley Police arrested Tuesday a 21-year-old man who is suspected of deserting the Armed Forces about four years ago.

Recognizing Talmadge, the officer arrested him at 12:30 p.m.

He was booked into Marin County Jail pending arrival of federal authorities, police said.

Cities' Mr. Fix-It Has Problems

EDITOR'S NOTE: For three and a half years, Housing Secretary George W. Romney has grappled with the nation's urban crisis. The following report by G. C. Thelen Jr. of the AP Special Assignment Team discusses Romney's efforts.

By G. C. THELEN Jr.

WASHINGTON (AP) — To George W. Romney, struggling to be President Nixon's fix-it man for the cities, the problems he faces are not just tough, they "are the most complex on the face of the globe."

Testifying to their intractability, the secretary of Housing and Urban Development has seen remedies become problems and well-intentioned strategies backfire in controversy.

Romney admits to little success in his match with the crisis of urban America. "The cities are still going downhill," he said.

Among the problems, complexities and ironies of his three and a half years at HUD:

Romney, the production man of Rambler auto fame, succeeded in driving government-subsidized housing starts to record levels. But along the road to landmark production of nearly 500,000 assisted units last year, he harvested a crop of speculation scandals that have left thousands of the inner-city poor with shoddy, government-insured houses sold at large profit by real-estate operators.

Romney, long-time civil rights leader of liberal Republicans, assumed office determined to open additional suburban housing to low-income city dwellers. But, following a stormy trial run of his plans at Warren, Mich., the President stripped Romney of any power to make economic integration a condition of receiving federal aid.

Romney, an enthusiast for solving urban problems at local governmental levels, saw the White House pull the teeth from another plan that seeks to induce the suburbs as well as the cities to join in attacking inner-city ills. "Succeed? Not in 100 years," said one housing specialist of what's now left of the plan.

Romney, the foe of centralized government, faulted Democrats from the outset for allegedly overpromising help for the cities and tying the hands of mayors. Yet he has protected his cupboard of inherited Great Society programs from White House budget-cutters, hoarding the dollars for the day Congress might enact federal revenue sharing for the cities.

How does his performance add up?

"A good job with some of the most difficult problems in the country," said Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Mass., chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee that controls HUD dollars.

"A decent man, extraordinarily righteous in his commitment to racial justice, who's been hamstrung by the administration," said Herbert M. Franklin, vice president of the National Urban Coalition.

"His intentions and efforts are better than his performance," said Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., a senior member of the House subcommittee on housing. "This is not due to any lack of ability but to political restraints from the White House."

The nation's mayors are particularly pleased with Romney's attempts to untie the strings of federal aid, to turn narrow-purpose grants into broad-based support of strapped municipal budgets.

But some are critical of what they see as the Nixon administration's preoccupation with foreign affairs at the expense of domestic concerns.

"The housing program has been a great success, but within the central city and within these blighted, abandoned areas of the central city, we have not worked out solutions," Romney said.

Factory-built housing, stimulated by the Nixon administration, has only begun to roll off production lines, and dollar savings, if any, are not known. But Romney already has described Operation Breakthrough as a success.

"I say it is a success because of the changes it has made in the housing industry and in local attitudes toward new and efficient production techniques which will continue to revolutionize and modernize the housing industry," he said.

"On the urban development side of HUD, not much has changed under Romney," said the Urban Coalition's Franklin.

The present categorical aid programs have disbursed billions of dollars with little result, said Romney. "To continue would mean throwing more billions of the taxpayers' money away. Larger infusions of money have not served to solve the problems."

Moreover, he argues, housing problems are really the result of social ills beyond assault by his department.

"The forces that cause abandonment and decline of large neighborhoods are not primarily physical, but are primarily human, social and governmental," said Romney. "We will not solve this crisis if we pretend that it is just a housing crisis."

Electronic Quiz Gets Jail Time

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —A 21-year-old electronics expert who stole $1 million in equipment from under the nose of the Pacific Telephone Co. by tricking its computer for three years was sentenced Wednesday to two months in jail.

Jerry N. Schneider was put on three year's probation on condition he refrain from buying or selling any telephone equipment.

With a phony telephone truck to haul the goods and an electronic device to order more, Schneider ran a thriving company that offered bargain basement prices. A suspicious employe tipped off the district attorney's office and an investigation was launched.

Politeness Policy By Two Koreas

SEOUL (UPI) — The recent agreement between South and North Korea to end hostilities has wrought quiet but significant changes in relations between the two parts of the divided land.

The two sides have dropped abusive language in addressing each other on the basis of a provision in the accord not to defame or slander each other.

In the continuing bitterness following the Korean war of 1950-53, the two sides called each other "puppets." In South Korea, the official title for the North Korean Communists was "the Northern Puppet." North Korea used a similar expression about the South.

Following the announcement Tuesday of the South-North accord in a surprise joint communique, the Seoul government moved to drop the word "puppet" and refer to the country as North Korea. North Korea's official title for the South now is South Korea.

In South Korea, which lives under tight anti-Communist laws and institutions, the sudden change caused confusion, particularly in schools where anticommunist education was part of the curriculum.

The education ministry has started a review of the curricula for various educational institutions to accommodate the new reality.

The mass media faces a similar situation. Newspapers and radio-television stations immediately stopped using the previous name for the North Korean Communists. But it will be some time before a new series of titles are prepared to meet their need on all fronts.

Opposition lawmakers continued a question-and-answer session at the National Assembly today on all aspects of the negotiations that led to the South-North agreement and the significance of the accord itself.

Their questions concentrated on whether the negotiations conducted by Director Lee Hurak of the South Korean Central Intelligence Agency and Kim Young-joo, brother of North Korean Premier Kim Il-sung, were not in violation of South Korean laws.

Some opposition members asked how the South-North agreement will affect the United Nations Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea (UNCURK), the United Nations' main political arm in Korea, and the Korean Military Armistice Commission.

Cabinet ministers stressed in their replies that the agreement seeks to prevent armed clashes and that South Korea's basic anticommunist posture and its major policies remain unchanged.

Business circles in South Korea voiced the view that the South-North accord will serve to stimulate foreign investments in South Korea with its promises of eased tensions.

Sen. Gravel Wants Vice President Slot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Mike Gravel announced today he would seek the Democratic vice-presidential nomination at the national convention in Miami Beach next week.

The Alaskan told reporters he would give delegates an opportunity to select the vice-presidential nominee in an open contest instead of "rubber-stamping" the presidential nominee's choice.

The 42-year-old freshman senator's formal announcement at a news conference confirmed what he had been informally telling reporters and Democratic party officials around the country, that he was actively seeking the vice-presidential nomination.

Gravel said that as vice president he would "add meaningful dialogue to the chief executive's deliberations rather than pay lip service and embarrassed obedience to unknown policies, as is the case today.

"As vice-president I would seek to open new vistas of communication and information to the news media and the people," he said. "I would not abuse and intimidate those who seek honest information, as is the case today.

"As vice president, I would act as an advocate for all the people, and especially minorities before a complex and insensitive bureaucracy."

"As vice president I would hope to be my own man."

Mind Dynamics Inc.—Philosophical Mixed Bag

By JEFF GREER

"If I called my school 'spiritual dynamics', nobody'd come," explained Alexander Everett, founder of Mind Dynamics Inc. of San Rafael.

His firm is a highly programmed self-improvement school. Its family tree has roots in such varied sources as Dale Carnegie, Zen and other Oriental mysticism, Christian Science, several camps of Viennese psychiatry, body language and the age of Aquarius.

Alpha brain waves are a big thing at Mind Dynamics classes. The student who learns to control the alpha waves is supposed to be able to solve all sorts of personal problems, get along better with other people, sense happenings through time and space and sometimes help other people overcome physical or mental problems.

The school, begun in San Rafael under the wing of cosmetics tycoon William Penn Patrick two years ago, has spawned satellite classes nationwide. Everett has been touring Canada, Australia and other nations to spread the Mind Dynamics message.

Everett's followers and the school literature call him "Alexander" without any surname. He has been a schoolmaster in England and Texas, a restaurateur and a sports car race driver.

Everett said he created Mind Dynamics Inc. because he thought schools in his native England and in the United States put too much stress on mental and physical development "but not enough on the spiritual."

"This is the Aquarian Age, when the mind of man's going to be the most developed. But the church won't be playing such a big role. In the past, the church aroused men emotionally rather than spiritually . . .," he said.

Through his training, Everett said, men, women and children can learn "the individuality of man, and that this the age of cooperation, brotherhood and unity. Anybody who takes the course will become more loving."

Everett said he used his self-taught techniques of employing alpha waves and other mind powers to decide on coming to Marin.

"I went to my 'levels'. Three areas came to mind: San Francisco, San Jose and Denver."

He decided on San Francisco and Marin because "the area stimulates me, it's cosmopolitan" and it was where the United Nations began and a blueprint was drafted for a possible world government.

Here he met Patrick, founder of a controversial business empire, and sporadic conservative candidate for political office.

"I like where he's going and not where his head is," Everett said. "This guy is really going places — otherwise I wouldn't be working with him."

Mind Dynamics "is not owned by Holiday Magic (Patrick's principal firm) but Patrick is an investor" in the school, Everett said. Patrick also is chairman of the Mind Dynamics board.

Holiday Magic and Sta-Power salesmen are urged to take the Mind Dynamics course or purchase a set of tape casettes for home study of the mental techniques.

ALEXANDER EVERETT
Just Alexander to his students

The school publishes a monthly newsletter, replete with graduates' tributes to the training for helping them in business, family troubles, weight problems and smoking. Each issue is dedicated to one of the seven meaningful rainbow colors as taught by Mind Dynamics. Each color is described with many meanings in folklore, astrology and history.

The Mind Dynamics theory centers on a 36-hour course, usually taught in eight-hour chunks during two weekends. The cost is $150.

The classes are "not the end, but the beginning," according to Jerry Schwartz, Mind Dynamics graduate, now an instructor and official of the firm. The classes shun "alpha wave teaching machines" espoused by some other schools "but we do discuss brain waves," he said.

"We're more interested in the mind than the brain — the nonphysical part that's in charge of us.

"When we learn to understand ourselves better," students can "go within ourselves" to solve all sorts of problems, Schwartz said. Mind Dynamics uses "theories and concepts from yoga, Zen, hypnosis" and many other philosophies, he added. "Around these, we've built a series of techniques that can teach people the 'how' of mind dynamics: step one, step two, step three . . ."

He said the students are exposed to ESP (extra sensory perception) "but we call it 'Effective Sensory Projection'."

Mind Dynamics is a profit-making business, but Schwartz was more enthusiastic about Rivendell, a retreat in El Dorado County where the school's techniques are used on alcoholics, drug addicts and other troubled persons "who need to change their lives dramatically."

Mind Dynamics offers up to 10 scholarships at a time for the two seven-day sessions held there each month. Men and women participants learn to trade former diets for raw vegetables and fruit, give up smoking, and "rehabilitate themselves."

The more routine Mind Dynamics classes held in San Rafael and other cities resemble a combination of rap session, lecture, seance and sales pitch.

This writer spent an hour with a class conducted by Charlene Afremow of San Rafael. She is a graduate of the course and said she has repeated it several times studying under other leaders.

The onetime Holiday Magic salesman credited the course for salvaging her marriage, which had ended in divorce after 14 years and two sons. Both she and her estranged husband took the course, remarried and enrolled their children in it.

Mrs. Afremow strode into her classroom like a cheer leader. Her students ranged from preteen-agers to grayharied people in garb varying from hippie to garden party.

The red-haried, smallish teacher perched on a tall stool in the center of her circled students.

"Let's have no security hangups," she declared, "uncross your arms and legs . . . you have no reason to be defensive."

Their body language tended to, the students followed her in "becoming one with the sea" as a tape recorder played back the sound of waves sloshing onto a shore. Their heads drooped, their eyes closed and hands were mostly limp in their laps.

"Feel the water . . . up to your knees . . . " the teacher softly suggested. "Feel . . .the sand between your toes . . . run along this beach . . . and be . . . free and alive . . ."

After announcing that the "environmental" tapes can be purchased so students can practice their lessons at home, Mrs. Afremow urged their use to "hit that clear button on your mental adding machine."

Briskly, teacher turned to another mental exercise. "Go to your levels" she said, "and then we'll have you describe your workshops."

The "workshops" are imagined places underground, where their creators are supposed to solve their problems, aided by a male and a female assistant. The students listened attentively and critically to the workshop descriptions, sometimes muttering admiringly at a particular touch of imagination.

One workshop was guarded by three lions and three clocks. Another was all glass, with a grassy floor and ceiling open to the sun.

Another workshop was down 12 steps — apparently a significant number — and encrusted with "treasure rocks."

One student declared he had no workshop, "no male, no female . . I have only one tool —a dentist's chair. I can communicate with anybody, no problem. I'm doing pretty well . . ."

"Baloney," retorted Mrs. Afremow. If you didn't see a male and a female, you're not communicating on the outside . . ." Your male and female are you."

An older man's workshop imaginings "got me a worm for an assistant . . . he didn't even talk; maybe it's a she . . ."

"There's no limit to the mind," said Mrs. Afremow.

This reporter got up to leave.

"See, there. We've blown his mind clear out of here," teacher said.

MIND DYNAMICS RALLY — Carol Longo (right) of Novato "goes to her levels" to tap "alpha wave" and other mental powers in a postgraduate session with teacher Alan Dohrmann at one of the frequent postgraduate seminars attended by many of Mind Dynamics students. They listen to inspirational talks, discuss problems and continue mental training.

Concern: Grading Of Project

Developers of the controversial Meadowsweet Station 528-unit townhouse project were told last night by Corte Madera Board of Design to keep grading to a minimum.

William McBride, zoning administrator, said the board deferred action on Cal-West Communities Inc., application for design approval on the first phase of Madera del Presidio. (The development has run the gamut of names, and, according to board chairman William B. Gilbert, is now going under the name of Sunset Park.)

McBride said board members went into details of design and location of the first 128 units. They emphasized they preferred as little grading as possible and wanted the western, or freeway, side of the project generously landscaped.

"This would be a visual amenity and also form a sound barrier," said McBride.

Representatives of the developers showed color patterns to be used on the townhouses, said McBride. The exteriors would be in earth toned stucco with redwood trim, and the roofing of heavy asphalt shingles.

The board was concerned with the proposed off-street parking facilities, and considered them too long and bare, he said. They suggested they should be modified and broken up with landscaping.

It was proposed to leave most of the surrounding land in natural vegetation, he reported, and the board requested details on the types of plantings proposed, deferring the entire application to the next meeting on July 24 at 7:30 p.m.

Hewlett Turns Self In After Row

Gregory C. Hewlett, a director of the Bolinas Public Utilities District, turned himself in to the sheriff's department yesterday to face possible charges stemming from a rowdy incident on the Fourth of July when a gang of youths twice rescued him from arrest.

Sheriff's Inspector Harry E. Bock tried to arrest Hewlett on suspicion of being drunk at a rock concert in Bolinas at 5 p.m. on Independence Day after the director allegedly cursed him and told him to leave the area.

Bock said he managed to handcuff Hewlett after his effort to tone down the music was interrupted, but then a gang of about 25 "hippie-type subjects" attacked Bock and freed Hewlett.

The gang, according to Bock, then set off cherry bombs in and atop his patrol car, and four climbed onto the hood and began jumping up and down. Bock reportedly suffered a sprained finger and cut thumb in the melee.

Peter J. Muzio, a deputy public defender who represents Hewlett in a pending vandalism case, and another attorney tried to return the 32-year-old director to Bock, but were prevented by the gang.

Bock said they cut the handcuffs he had placed on Hewlett, but Hewlett agreed when he turned himself in to pay for the cuffs, according to the sheriff's department.

Hewlett then was booked into Marin County Jail on suspicion of being drunk in public and posted $25 bail to appear Tuesday in Marin Municipal Court.

Bock had been summoned to the concert in the picnic area of Bolinas Park by neighbors complaining about the noise.

Hewlett already is charged with two counts of vandalism to the property of two men who have opposed the antidevelopment policy of the public utilities district board.

Alto Sanitary Budget Is Set

The Alto Sanitary District board last night approved a final budget of $11,400 for next year, requiring no increase in the current tax rate.

The budget is a "few hundred dollars" higher than last year, according to board clerk, Daniel McNeil, but the tax rate will remain constant at 15 cents per $100 of assessed value.

The budget includes approximately $2,400 for employees' salaries, $7,000 for maintenance and $2,000 for capital outlays — mostly for antipollution devices for the district.

Mild Slap At Proposed College Plan

The proposed Sonoma State College Area Master Plan was mildly criticized by property owners and faculty members last night at a hearing before the Rohnert Park City Council.

City Clerk Kathryn Logue said ranchers around the college said they were concerned about the effect the plan would have on taxes. Some of the ranch lands are zoned for future residential development in the plan. The ranchers said that although actual development will be many years away, their tax rate will increase greatly in the interim.

Several faculty members urged that a plan be adopted without too much urban development around the campus. They said the rural atmosphere is a great benefit to the college.

Mrs. Logue said the council will consider adopting the plan at its July 17 meeting.

In other business, the council appointed Syl C. Cincera to the planning commission. Cincera, 401 Arlen Drive, is employed by Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

Bike Path Still Being Sought

The Enchanted Knolls Homeowners Association agreed last night to continue to urge the city of Mill Valley to build a bicycle trail and bridge from the end of Sycamore Avenue to Strawberry.

President Louis Millin said the group already has asked the city to include funds for the trail in its 1972-73 budget. The bridge envisioned by the group would cross Salt Marsh Creek at the end of Richardson Bay, go around Sabella's restaurant and across the underpass below Highway 101.

Yorty To Do Show From Convention

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Mayor Sam Yorty may be going to the Democratic National Convention without much support for his presidential candidacy, but he will have a job to do there anyway—as a disc jockey.

The mayor told a news conference Wednesday that he will do a daily broadcast from Miami Beach for Los Angeles radio station KMPC, spinning records, reading news, interviewing personalities and doing commercials.

Group Votes To Oppose Recall Move

The Village Square Association of Corte Madera voted today to oppose the recall of Mayor Holmes S. (Pete) Norville.

Association president Robert D. Satterwaite said members voted unanimously to support Norville, stating the recall movement was "unwarranted and unnecessary."

Meeting in the chamber of commerce office, members discussed parking problems in the Village Square, said Satterwaite, and drew up a list of three recommendations to be presented to the town council.

These included a requestthat parking be allowed on the Menke Park side of First Street, presently red-zoned, that an unloading zone be provided in front of the TV shop in the square and that the town "more faithfully enforce parking restrictions presently on the book in the area," reported Satterwaite.

Bomb Aboard Jet Proves To Be False

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A Delta Air Lines jet was searched last night after an anonymous caller told authorities a bomb was aboard.

The call came shortly after the plane, flight 823 for San Francisco, had left. The plane was called back and was released after a search disclosed no explosives.

Petaluma May Get Development Board

The establishment of a development control board to keep Petaluma's growth in bounds was proposed last night at the planning commission meeting.

Planning Director William C. McGivern said the residential development control system sets guidelines to keep growth within the limit of 500 new living units each year. He told the commission it would serve to preserve the quality of life in the community, protect its open space and provide a balance of housing types to accommodate all income levels.

McGivern said the development control board would process applications by developers and decide which could build each year based on the quality of the plans and needs of the community.

Under the plan, developers would submit all building plans for the next construction year. No one developer could be allotted more than 100 living units per year.

McGivern said the plan does not set the number of persons to serve on the board but suggested it include representatives from the city council, planning commission, Petaluma Board of Education, Old Adobe School District board and citizens-at-large.

McGivern said the plan will be presented to the city council and a public hearing will be set in August.

No Takers At $500 Per Home

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Municipal eyebrows shot up when the San Francisco Redevelopment Commission put up for sale 32 Victorian houses at $500 each for a minimum bid.

There were no takers yesterday, however, because of the high cost of moving the elderly, clapboarded, bay-windowed relics of a time past.

Land has been set aside for relocation of 13 of the buildings elsewhere in the west-central section of the city; another 19 must be moved, and the balance may be preserved where they area.

Novato Youth Is Reported In Fair Condition

A 19-year-old Novato youth, who fell from a west Marin bridge Tuesday, was reported in fair condition with head injuries at Marin General Hospital today.

Sheriff's deputies said Mark Greene of 94 Eagle Drive fell about 25 feet from Shafter Bridge at 1:43 a.m. on July 4.

Deputies said it is common for groups of young people to gather on the bridge off Sir Francis Drake Boulevard during the night.

Gallery Wins Fight To Retain Painting

LONDON (UPI)—Enough money has been raised to prevent Titian's "Death of Acteeon," one of Britain's most cherished art treasures, from going to the United States, an art source said today.

A spokesman for the National Gallery declined to comment on the report.

The sources said the National Gallery has raised the $4,583,800 needed to prevent the masterpiece from going to billionaire J. Paul Getty's private museum in Malibu, Calif.

The 16th-century canvas was sold last June by the Earl of Harewood, Queen Elizabeth's cousin, to American art dealer Jilius Weitzner who resold it to Getty for $4.5 million.

The government agreed to withhold a licence to export the painting to the United States until the end of the month, providing the gallery could raise enough money to buy the canvas back from Getty at the price he paid for it.

The sources said the money was raised by public donations, government grants and the gallery's own funds.

The masterpiece had been on loan to the gallery for the past 10 years. Getty agreed to allow it to remain there while efforts were being made to raise the money.

Boise Cascade Verdict Reversed

OAKLAND (UPI) — An Alameda County Superior Court judge has set aside a jury verdict granting damages of $543,000 against Boise Cascade Corp., holding there was "insufficient evidence" and an "error in law."

Judge William H. Brailsford also granted the company's request for a new trial on the claim that it and two subscribers had made misrepresentations in the sale of three parcels of Siskiyou County land in 1968.

The suit was filed by Dr. Irving London and L. Scott Barksdale, a stockbroker, both of San Francisco.

The two alleged Boise had misrepresented the value of the land, access to the land, the availability of water and the kind of road it intended to build there.

Graham Calls For Youth To Trek To Miami

BLACK MOUNTIAN, N.C. UPI)—Evangelist Billy Graham wants "thousands of Christian students, street Christians and Jesus people" to join other young demonstrators at the political conventions in Miami Beach.

Graham called Wednesday for young Christians to go to Miami Beach to "hand out Christian literature, sing, smile and love."

"What a great thing it wouldbe to see scores of these youths who went for other reasons returning home with the love of God in their hearts," he said.

Development Backer

KUALA LUMPUR (UPI) — Malaysian Prime Minister Tun Abdal Razak is noted for his dedication to development projects, particularly the second five-year development plan launched last year. Urging its successful completion, he said on June 1: "We have only 1,270 days left."

U.S. Red Party Former Leader Dies At Age 89

NEW YORK (UPI) — Max Bedacht, a founder and former top official of the Communist Party U.S.A., died Tuesday at the age of 89.

Bedacht, who immigrated to this country from his native Germany in 1908, helped organize the domestic party in 1919, an act which resulted in his being indicted for seditious conspiracy. He was never brought to trial on the charge and years later the indictment was dropped.

Bedacht was expelled from the party in 1948 in a leadership squabble but maintained that he still believed in the principles of communism. A few years ago he was reinstated, according to his family, but did not become active again.

Ferry, Houseboat Law Due Study

An ordinance which would make ferry terminals and houseboats conditionally permitted uses in Sausalito's waterfront area will be reviewed by the Sausalito Planning Commission at 8 p.m. today in city hall.

Currently, terminals and houseboats are not among uses permitted in the zone which extends along the waterfront from Mono Street to the north city limits.

The city council, which asked that the regulation be drafted, had referred the matter to the commission for its recommendation.

Department Names Export Sales Boss

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Laurel C. Meade, a native of Lafayette, Ind., has been named acting general sales manager of the Agriculture Department's Export Marketing Service(EMS), Agriculture secretary Earl L. Butz said today.

Meade had been director of the oilseeds branch in the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. In the EMS post, Meade will direct the department's export promotion programs, including export credit programs under which officials hope eventually to make large new grain sales to Russia.

Student-Vote Plans For Summer Told

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The National Movement for the Student Vote unveiled plans yesterdayfor a summer project called "California First Vote" to register 125,000 young voters during the next three months.

Although the registration drive is billed as nonpartisan, project director Linda Bond said young voters have been registering Democratic by about a 7-3 margin.

In the San Francisco Bay Area, she said, newly franchised voters have been signing up Democratic instead of Republican at a 10-1 ratio.

"Obviously the Democrats are more interested in us," she said, "but that doesn't mean Republicans are uninterested."

Miss Bond said about 70 deputy registrars would be canvassing many counties of the state to register the voters between 18 and 24 years of age with special emphasis on minority and working-class youth.

At a news conference sponsored by Assemblymen Willie Brown, D-San Francisco, and William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, she said the national organization has just recently found that more than 65 per cent of young voters are nonstudents.

She said on-campus drives have registered as many as 80 to 93 per cent of the student population at some universities. But she said the registration rates for nonstudents rarely has exceeded 40 per cent.

Brown praised the project leaders for expanding their efforts to nonstudents, saying the summer registration drive will show "the real muscle of young people."

Bagley used the opportunity to make a campaign pitch for President Nixon, whom he said "should at least be given some passing credit" for helping the campaign to give 18, 19 and 20 year olds the right to vote under the 26th Amendment.

He said previous presidents had given the amendment lip service but had actually "worked against" the proposal to give young people the right to vote.

Many Refuse Cities' Airline Tax

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A new taxpayer's revolt may be in the making—this one against a drive by some revenue-short cities to levy a head tax on airline passengers.

Backed by a favorable Supreme Court decision, Richmond, Va., Sarasota-Bradenton, Fla., Huntsville, Ala. and Saginaw, Mich., are placing a $1 dollar departure tax on each airline passenger.

The court has ruled that the cities can put the money into a fund to be used for construction and improvements of their airports.

But a sixth city—Philadelphia—has carried its head tax program a step farther. It is taxing passengers $2 on arrival and $2 for departures. And the money will not go into an airport fund, but will be used as part of the city's general revenues.

According to the Air Transport Association (ATA), a trade organization representing the major domestic airlines, 12 other cities have enacted head tax proposals, but are not implementing them as yet. Another 24 cities are considering levying a head tax on airline passengers, the spokesman said.

But the taxpayer is not taking kindly to the idea of buying an airline ticket and then paying to land or depart from an airport.

Philadelphia began enforcing the tax this week, triggering long delays at airport terminals and irritating passengers to the point where they refused to pay the tax.

According to ATA, 2,092 passengers boarded flights at Philadelphia International airport July 1, the date the tax went into effect. Some 757 passengers flatly refused to pay. On July 2, 1,450 boarded flights and 609 declined to pay the added tax.

Philadelphia officials, however, have accused the airlines of trying to sabotage the city tax by allowing passengers to sign waivers asserting their refusal to pay the tax.

According to the airlines, once a passenger signs the waiver the airline cannot refuse to allow him to board the plane.

But Philadelphia officials said passengers who refuse to pay the tax will be warned that they are subject to fines ranging up to $300 and could face jail terms up to 90 days.

But the airline industry is hopeful Congress will act to head off the confrontation.

Under a bill before the Senate Aviation subcommittee, state and local head taxes would be barred even if the money is used for airport improvements and construction.

In the House, a bill calls for an 18-month moratorium on the head taxes to give the Civil Aeronautics Board time to study the controversy.

New Aide For Novato Boys Club

Carolyn M. Crabtree of 663 Cherry Street has been named director of public relations for the Novato Boys Club.

Mrs. Crabtree will handle publicity and promotion and coordinate activities of the club and its supporters, succeeding Hubert Voight, who directed the club's fund-raising drive the past year.

Mrs. Crabtree, a member of the Novato Unified School District board, formerly was a television producer in the Washington, D.C. area and a publications writer for headquarters of the United States Army Forces, Far East, in Tokyo.

She is a native of West Virginia and has been a resident of Novato for 10 years.

Save-Water Plea In Tokyo

TOKYO (UPI)—Tokyo city government officials distributed leaflets today asking residents, department stores and restaurants to save water in the wake of the worst water shortage since 1964.

City officials said reservoirs and rivers are running low because of a dry spell during June, the height of the annual rainy season.

The weather bureau said only 4.5 inches of rain fell in the Tokyo vicinity last month, about half the amount usually registered during the same period.

Youth Is Killed In Police Raid

BURNSVILLE, N.C. (UPI)—Starkly different versions of a police raid at a mountain campground shroud the shooting death of a youthful camper.

Stanley William Altland, 20, of Clearwater, Fla., was killed by a shotgun blast Monday night when authorities raided a party.

Altland and 24 friends from Clearwater had camped out at the Black Mountain campground near the Blue Ridge Parkway and planned to leave in time to catch the Rolling Stones rock concert in Charlotte tonight.

Don Porter, 25, one of the group, said Wednesday the group had been shooting fireworks and drinking late Monday, but most of them were sleeping when several Yancey County deputies, led by Sheriff Kermit Banks, descended on the campsite.

Banks said reports of activities at the campsite spurred the raid and that he was answering "an urgent plea for help" from U.S. Forest Service officials.

Banks said a shotgun accidentally discharged while he and deputies scuffled with youths who were attacking them.

The youths, described by Porter as having long hair and wearing blue jeans, denied they attacked the deputies.

"We were so scared, we thought they were going to kill us all," said Kim Burns, 18.

Mark Goodpasture, 17, said the officers "came storming in and started knocking people around for no reason."

"They came in and started knocking us around like Marines at bayonet training," said Porter. "There were people dragged out of their vans by their feet like a side of beef or something."

The sheriff said, "No one was unduly mistreated, it was the deputies who were attacked. I don't know of an officer who was not attacked."

Donald Jay Barrett, 19, said, "We were all standing around, most of us had our hands over our heads. I turned around and saw an officer hit a boy standing beside him with the back of his shotgun.

"The gun went off and then Stanley fell down," Barrett said.

Porter said he escaped by running through the woods. The others were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct and released later on $300 bond each.

They face Sept. 6 preliminary hearings in Yancey County District Court.

Bridge Board Is Ordered To Vote With City Policy

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco's nine members on the Golden Gate Bridge District's board of directors must vote in accordance with city policy, City Atty. Thomas M. O'Connor said yesterday.

But the city's two representatives on the Bay Area Air Pollution Controls District may vote according to their own opinion, he added.

O'Connor gave his opinion after reading the state laws setting up the two organizations, finding that on the bridge board the San Franciscans represent the city and must, as a matter of law, vote "in accordance with San Francisco's established policy."

But, on the pollution board, San Franciscans represent the people of the state as a whole and not the City of San Francisco.

Sonoma Court To Hear Burglary Plea

Rodney W. Hall, 22, of Santa Rosa, was arraigned yesterday in Central Sonoma Municipal Court on a burglary charge.

Judge Frank J. Passalacqua set bail at $1,000 and scheduled Hall to enter a plea today. Hall was arrested yesterday when Rohnert Park police said they found him hiding in a field behind Holt's Marine where 26 items had been stolen.

Clothing, Other Items Taken From Auto

Clothing and other items worth $490 were reported stolen from an auto parked at the Sausalito Yacht Harbor sometime June 25 or 26, Sausalito police reported yesterday.

Officers said sailing boots, a jacket, pants, sweaters, sandals, books, an attache case and suitcase and a directional finder were taken from an auto belonging to Karline M. Kerr of Capitola, Santa Cruz County. The auto was entered by breaking a wing window, police said.

What should a precision instrument look like?

For those who see no reason why it shouldn't look like a precision instrument, Omega has designed this electronic chronometer. In our opinion, it is destined to set the style for a whole new generation of clean, simple, honest design. Water-resistant in stainless steel case with matching bracelet. Date-telling dark gray dial. And every bit the precision instrument it appears to be. $225.

Optimistic Talk At 49ers' Parley

By RALPH CHATOIAN

There was optimism in the air, good food table, and happy talk about football championships and Super Bowls.

San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, 49er head coach Dick Nolan and some of his players took their turn at the rostrum to talk football yesterday at the team's kickoff luncheon which honored Ed Beard as 1971 Eshmont Award winner.

(The Eshmont Memorial Award is the team's top honor, voted on by the players themselves, on secret ballot. It is named in honor of Len Eshmont, a member of the first 49er team in 1946. He died in 1957.)

As the sounds of cable cars clanged their way down California Street outside the Fairmont Hotel, the 200 or so persons inside that hotel's Pavilion Room heard Nolan say that the 1971 team was better than the 1970 team and this year it will be better than the '71 group. And there will be hard work when the Niners open their camp in nine days, was the hint.

"They'll be fully aware of this when we go to camp," Nolan said in that quiet way of his. A little way down the head table 49er President Lou Spadia couldn't hold back a smile. The nine players scattered around the room weren't smiling. As everyone knows, the players relish training camp as much as those Christians of another time enjoyed wrestling lions (and I don't mean Detroit).

NOLAN SAID there were three reasons for needed 49er improvement — New Orleans, Atlanta and Los Angeles, the other teams in the National Football Conference Western Division.

Veteran linemen Len Rohde (offense) and Charlie Kreuger (defense) added a little humor to things. Rohde told the story on how Spadia had called the team together and said they were going to add some class. " 'We'll change our shorts every day,' Mr. Spadia told us. 'Okay, Rohde, you change with Krueger; Charlie, you change with Beisler.' "

Krueger, in talking about his off season exploits, said he did some traveling, including a trip to the South Pacific and Bora Bora. Sitting down to dinner one night, said the 270-pound Krueger, he heard a voice behind him say, "Hi, Charlie." He turned and there was Spadia.

"I TOLD HIM, 'I know you and coach Nolan are worried about my weight, but isn't this carryng things too far?'" No way to escape, Charlie.

Krueger, in his 14th year of football, said, "We have a good chance to get to the Super Bowl, and a good chance to win it."

In being presented with the Eshmont Award, a $1,000 watch, the recipient has his choice of naming the man to present it. Beard picked Bill Barker, a personal friend of his from Chesapeake, Va. where Beard lives in the off season.

"THIS IS probably the highlight of my life," said Beard, who added, "I have many things to be thankful for, especially to the 49ers for taking a country boy out of Chesapeake, Va., and giving him a chance to play football.'

Beard was first string middle linebacker until losing his job to Frank Nunley early in the 1969 season. Now he is the captain of the 49ers' special teams (punts, kickoffs, etc.).

Spadia lauded Beard for "taking a mediocre 1969 special teams unit and making it the best in the NFL.He was a first string middle linebacker, but when he was put on the special team — he actually asked to be put on the team — he kept his head up. He shows what can be done by just keeping your head up."

WHEN ALIOTO was talking about the "improved" Candlestick Park for the 49er games, he said only 1,000 season tickets are still available, making 58,000 tickets already sold to season fans. About 2,000 tickets will remain for fans to buy the day before each home game. So when it's added up, all 61,000-plus Candlestick tickets will be sold for each game.

Remember the days when the team played before an average of 34,000 fans and 25,000 empty seats? It was only three years ago, in the old days of Kezar Stadium. What a difference a winner makes.

FIVE TOES AND A MILLION KICKS LATER

Gordon Tovani of San Rafael, self-proclaimed "World's Greatest Barefoot Kicker," is shown in above photo as he teed up a football yesterday on the playground of St. Anselm's School in San Anselmo and in photo on right, kicked it over the school building, more than 40 feet in the air. It was his one millionth place kick. The 46-year-old Tovani, who has been kicking footballs since he was six years old, claims to have kept an accurate log of all his kicks, and now says his "serious" kicking is over and the rest of his barefooted kicking will be "just for fun and relaxation." Melges In 2nd Soling Trials Win

Bud Melges of Zender, Wis. captured his second straight race in the best-of-seven U.S. Olympic Games Soling class trials off Berkeley yesterday and moved within a single point of the overall lead.

CONVINCING

Melges decisioned points leader Lowell North of San Diego by a convincing 2:13 through the 11-mile course to move into the second spot in overall standings.

John Dane of New Orleans was the early leader in the event, which is being sponsored by San Francisco Yacht Club of Belvedere, but Melges took the lead on the second leg of the course. Dane's boat was later dismasted by strong winds.

GOLDSMITH

Early leader Bruce Goldsmith slipped further behind with a third place finish as he dropped to third place in points standings. Fourth place holder Earl Elms of San Diego strengthened his hold on the position with a fourth place finish in the race.

Jerry Rumsey of Belvedere and Warwick Tompkins of Mill Valley were among the other finishers.

SIXTH RACE

The sixth race of the series will be held today with action concluding tomorrow.

Yesterday's results:
1. Bud Melges, Zender, Wisc.; Lowell North, San Diego; 3. Bruce Goldsmith, Winnetka, Ill.; 4. Earl Elms, San Diego; 5. Bob Johnstone, Chicago; 6. Sam Merrick, Washington, D.C.; 7. Jerry Rumsey, Belvedere; 8. Warwick Tompkins, Mill Valley; 9. Dick Stearns, Chicago and 10. Dave Curtis, Marblehead, Mass.

Series Leaders (after five races):
North 12 points, Melges 13, Goldsmith 21.4, Elms 25.4 and John Dane (fifth race did not finish) 31.1.

IN JUNIOR NET

Trio Of Marinites Survive

All but three of Marin County's junior tennis hopefuls were eliminated from the National Junior Hardcourt Championships yesterday at the Peninsula Tennis Club in Burlingame and at the Belvedere Tennis Club.

Diane DeMartini of Greenbrae found herself down a set in Girls 14 but she came back for a 3-6, 6-3, 6-3 win on the Belvedere courts where the 12 and 14 year-old action is taking place.

At Burlingame, Henry Jacobsen of Tiburon was the only Marin survivor as he eliminated Luis Perez, 7-6 and 6-1 in Boys 16. Bee Kilgore of Tiburon didn't play yesterday, drawing a bye.

Marin casualties included Carrie Zarraonandia of San Rafael (6-0, 6-2 loss to Fullerton's Susan Wright) in Girls 14, Kelly Hook of Tiburon (6-4, 6-1 loss to Saratoga's Stacey Naugle) in Girls 12 and Charles Bolcom of Belvedere (6-1, 6-1 loss to Mike Jee of San Francisco) in Boys 12.

John Beritzhoff of Mill Valley was eliminated in play at Burlingame. The only other Marin player left in that tourney, he was dropped 6-0, 6-0 by Mark Joffey.

There were few surprises at the two courts yesterday as all seeds advanced into the quarterfinals on the Belvedere courts. At Burlingame, members of the six-man Junior Davis Cup team appeared for the

AT WIMBLEDON

Smith Beats Netter Kodes

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI)-Number one seed Stan Smith's renowned strengths— service and smash—were enough to conquer plucky Jan Kodes 3-6, 6-4, 6-1, 7-5 in their Wimbledon semifinal Thursday.

The muscle of these basic talents helped Smith to overcome his persistent volleying lapses to make the men's final for the second year in a row.

These weaknesses cost Smith net—he put 13 backhand volleys into the net—cost him the first set 3-6 with Kodes.

These weaknesses cost Smith his service for 2-4 in the first. He broke back straight away with hard service returns but dropped the next for 3-5 with three more poor backhands.

In the second set Kodes again got the first break in the seventh with the U.S. champion seemingly unable to lift a backhand over the net.

SERVICE TAKEN

Again Smith took Kodes service for 4-4 with a fierce smash and a cunning lob that Kodes could not recover.

The pivot of the entire match came as Kodes was serving in the 10th game. On a deuce point, Kodes thought he had served a center line ace. He glared at the umpire, hands on hips, then banged a ball into the ground as the call was held against him. He double faulted and Smith coolly cracked a forehand past him to gain the set 4-6.

For the first time in the entire tournament Kodes was rattled, and he never really recovered his composure for the rest of the match.

Kodes had been moving fluently and hitting cleverly but Smith passed him with two splendid forehands to break his third service in a row and lead 2-0 in the third.

As Kodes sagged, the big corporal from Pasadena, Calif. thrived, crunching in his first services and finally getting that elusive touch with his volleys.

TWO SHOTS

Smith flipped two shots on his reformed backhand out of Kodes reach to grab his service and lead 4-0. Two blistering smashes, and a delicate backhand volley put Smith 5-0 ahead, his eighth game in a row.

While Kodes was steadier and stroking cleanly once more,

Giants Vs. Phillies Tonight

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The San Francisco Giants try again to play Philadelphia tonight with lefty Ron Bryant (6-4) still set to go against jumbo Jim Nash (1-4) of the Phillies.

Wednesday's contest was rained out and the Giants were disgruntled over that fact since Philadelphia has had trouble winning of late and the Giants have won seven out of nine in a hot streak, partially making amends for their disastrous start.

Bryant has been a big part of the comeback with three straight wins, two of them back-to-back shutouts.

Jim Barr and Bryant have given San Francisco added pitching power that it lacked in the early going. Another young starter, Steve Stone, has been announced fit to resume action Sunday at Montreal. He had been sidelined since June 19 with a sore shoulder.

Marin Wheel Deals Win Over Boobies

Jim Stone pounded two home runs last night to lead Marin Wheel Alignment to an 18-10 win over Boobies in the San Rafael Parks and Recreation softball league.

In other games, Steve Knopf went four-for-four to lead Suburban Auto Blues to a 16-1 verdict over Loose Suburban Auto and Jim Forest rapped two doubles as Mill Valley Air Force eased to an 11-3 win over Cal's Steak House.

Bench Role Looms For A's Jackson

OAKLAND (UPI) — Steve Kline has a case of the blahs which is giving opposing hitters the blues.

"The more tired I got, the more my pitch sank," said the young righthander of the New York Yankees after he beat the Oakland Athletics 4-1 on six hits Wednesday night to improve his record to 7-3.

Kline retired the last 14 A's in order with a sinker ball that had most of the Oakland batters baffled. Batterymate Thurman Munson cracked a two-run homer off starter and loser Ken Holtzman, now 11-6, to give Kline all the runs he needed.

Felipe Alou drove in the other two Yankee runs with a homer and double.

A's manager Dick Williams has decided to bench outfielder Reggie Jackson, the American League's home run leader, because he is in a slump. Jackson has only four hits in his last 46 official at bats.

"I think I'll give Reggie a rest and start George Hendrick in centerfield," said Williams. "Gene Tenace will go to right tomorrow (Thursday) night and (Joe) Rudi will stay in left."

Despite splitting in two games with the Yanks, the A's have managed only 11 hits in both games.

Holtzman, who was touched for 11 hits during the eight innings he worked, feels he must bear down a little harder.

"I'm just in the wrong groove," he said. "I will just have to go back out next time and find myself."

With his victory, Kline lowered his earned-run average to 1.87, best in the American League among starting pitchers.

Olympic Comeback Sought By 3 Runners

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI)—Jim Ryun, Mark Winzenried and Tom Von Ruden, shut out in the 800 meter run, start what they hope is a comeback in the 1,500 meter run tonight as the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials head into the home stretch after a welcome day off.

Ryun wound up fourth in the 800, won by Dave Wottle in world record-equalling time, while Winzenried and Von Ruden never were in the chase for the three Olympic berths.

PAINFUL TRIALS

Now, all three have to go through the painful trials route starting tonight and will have to finish in the top four in the various heats of the 1,500 to advance to Friday's semi-finals and eventually the final on Saturday.

With the hot weather continuing in the Eugene area and little chance of a letup, running three 1,500 meter races on consecutive days could prove to be quite a chore.

BOWLING GREEN

Also, standing in Ryun's, Winzenried's and Von Ruden's way once again will be Wottle, the slim gunner from Bowling Green who amazed everyone, including himself, by taking the 800 last week in 1:44:3. Also coming back in the 1,500 is Ken Swenson, who was third in the 800.

Steve Prefontaine, darling of the local fans, and world record holder Rod Milburn make their first appearances of the Trials on tonight's program, Prefontaine heading an 11-man field in one section of the 5,000 and Greg Fredericks, the NCAA champ, heading a 10-man second section. The first six in each heat advance to the final Sunday.

HIGH HURDLES

Trials in the 110-meter high hurdles and the 400-meter dash complete the program, with Milburn going in the hurdles and Lee Evans, John Smith, Wayne Collett and Vince Mathews in the 400.

There are five heats in the hurdles and six in the 400. Other better known stars in the hurdles include 1968 Olympians Willie Davenport and Leon Coleman, Erv Hall, Tom Hill

N.L. ROUNDUP

Robertson Belt Lifts Pirates

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

If ever Bob Robertson needed inspiration to snap out of his batting slump, it was delivered to him recently by his friendly postman.

"I've been receiving a lot of mail from fans with all kinds of suggestions," the good-natured Pittsburgh Pirates' infielder said Wednesday night. "The eye doctor sent me a letter offering to examine my eyes, I've received two St. Christopher's medals and the usual four-leaf clovers.

RABBIT'S FOOT

"But the one that got me was when someone sent me a real rabbit's foot through the mail."

Robertson has been receiving a lot of teasing over his anemic batting average, which stood at a limp .150 prior to Wednesday night's game at Houston, but he provided the game-winning blow with a two-run homer in the fourth inning as the Pirates whipped the Astros, 6-4.

"I can't really tell if I'm out of my slump or not," said Robertson, who also homered in a winning effort against the Cubs on Sunday. "I just go day to day. Things happen and you know what you're doing wrong on that particular day. You try to forget the past and you've got to try to keep your head up.

'REALLY BAD'

"I thought the worst was over. When I was really bad I was doing the same things wrong every day."

The victory enabled Pittsburgh to stretch its first place lead in the National League East to 1 1-2 games over the New York Mets, whose scheduled game with San Diego was postponed by rain. Elsewhere, Chicago and Atlanta split a doubleheader, the Cubs taking the opener, 4-1, and the Braves winning the second game, 3-2, and the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Montreal Expos, 7-3.

San Francisco at Philadelphia also was postponed by rain while St. Louis and Cincinnati weren't scheduled.

Pittsburgh was trailing 4-1 entering the fourth inning when Willie Stargell and Al Oliver hit consecutive singles. Manny Sanguillen drove them both home with a long double and Robertson followed with his fifth homer of the year. Roberto Clemente provided an insurance tally with his eighth homer in the fifth.

Bob Johnson turned in a brilliant relief performance over the final 7 2-3 innings, calling it "as good as any I've pitched in the National League," to gain his second victory after three losses. Johnson took over for Dock Ellis with a man on third and one out in the second inning and struck out Jim Wynn and Lee May on curveballs.

Johnson allowed only two hits the rest of the way, didn't walk anyone, struck out seven and retired 19 of the last 20 batters.

LUM HOMER

Phil Niekro earned the split with a six-hitter in the nightcap, with Mike Lum delivering the winning run with a fifth-inning homer. Niekro, who struck out seven batters and walked none, is now 8-7.

Willie Davis hit a three-run double in the second inning to climax a four-run rally that carried Los Angeles to its first victory in its last six games. Claude Osteen, although touched for a three-run homer by Montreal's Clyde Mashore in the second inning, went the distance to boost his record to 8-6.

A BIG HIT — Little Kyle Nelson, 1½ years old, got a helping hand from his father, Kansas City Royals' pitcher Roger Nelson during the father-son baseball game before the Detroit-Kansas City encounter yesterday in Kansas City. Although his cap almost covered his eyes, the lad got a hit to help the sons defeat the fathers. Kansas City later smashed Detroit, 8-2. (UPI Telephoto)

Nationwide Replies In Pros' Renaming

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A contest to rename the American Basketball Association's Memphis Pros has drawn nationwide resposne.

The club's prospective new owner, Chicago sportsman Charles O. Finley, initiated the contest last week, offering $2,500 to the winner and season tickets to the five runnersup.

Since then, the response has been overwhelming. Wednesday alone saw 4,000 entries deluge the Pros' Memphis headquarters. The total for the contest, which ends July 15, stands at 7,281.

Entries have come from cities such as Los Angeles, Detroit, Great Neck, N.Y., Tuscaloosa, Ala., Orlando, Fla., Kearns, Utah, and from the states of New Jersey, Wyoming, North Carolina, South Carolina and even Washington.

Officials said most of the out-of-state entries aren't being judged because they weren't submitted on postcards, according to the rules.

Among the entries are such names as Torch-Bearers, Hound Dogs, Memphites, Blunderbuss, Paladins, Bluff City Swishers, Rock Rollers, Banks, Delta A's, Sound Trotters, Dixie Crats, Tall Boys, Finley Hopefuls, and the Isaacs, presumably after entertainer Isaac Hayes of Memphis.

There's one entry which Finley said, "I don't particularly care for." It's the Finley Finks.

Jonas-Paced Winnipeg '11' Ties Toronto

TORONTO (UPI)—"It was what we call a 37 pass-kick with the two setbacks flanking out and working a pick on the defensive backs," said former Penn State star Don Jonas.

The play put Paul Williams in perfect position for Jonas's three-yard touchdown pass with 31 seconds remaining that enabled the Winnipeg Blue Bombers to tie the Toronto Argonauts, 14-14, in a Canadian Football League exhibition game.

Jonas, playing with pain after injuring his back in a preseason game against Montreal last Monday, also engineered Winnipeg's first score midway through the final quarter.

Boston Slugger Returns

By U.P.INTERNATIONAL

Carl Yastrzemski would rather get his four bases on singles than a home run.

Yaz hasn't homered since last Sept. 3, including a stint at the Red Sox training camp. The Boston outfielder, in fact, couldn't even hit his weight during the early part of the season.

A month on the disabled list — May 9 to June 9 — while mending from surgery on a torn ligament in his leg allowed Yastrzemski to go over his hitting slump that held his batting average to a mere .164.

TERROR

Suddenly, Yaz became the terror of old. Not with the long ball, but with well placed singles and doubles. He went 3-for-4 Wednesday night as he lifted his average to .302. His double provided an insurance run in Boston's 2-0 victory over Minnesota that extended the Red Sox' winning streak to six straight.

The Sox pitching staff reached something of a milestone by posting five consecutive complete game performances. Marty Pattin turned in a five-hitter in going the route as Boston Club officials went through their records trying to find the last time tpis was done. At the last report, the club was back as far as 1958 and still searching.

OTHER ACTION

In other A.L. action, Baltimore shut out Chicago, 1-0; Kansas City beat Detroit, 8-2; New York trounced Oakland, 4-1, and California edged Milwaukee, 1-0. The Texas at Cleveland game was rained out.

Boston scored the only run it needed in the second inning when Carlton Fisk doubled, took third on Jim Perry's wild pitch and came in on Bob Burda's sacrifice fly. Yastrzemski's double in the eighth scored Tommy Harper with an insurance run.

"If this club doesn't have momentum now, it never will," said Yaz. "We've got consistency in all departments.

Brooks Robinson's homer and Dave McNally's five-hit pitching carried Baltimore past Chicago and pushed the Orioles two games ahead of Detroit in the A.L. East. McNally put down a bases-loaded, no-out threat in the first inning as he won his ninth game. Wilbur Wood dropped his ninth decision.

LOLICH CHASED

Kansas City chased Detroit ace Mickey Lolich in the sixth inning with its second three-run inning of the game. Fred Patek scored twice and drove in a run with a single to lead the Royals' attack and back Paul Splittorff's eighth victory in 12 decisions. Lolich suffered his sixth loss against 13 wins.

Nolan Ryan tossed a four-hitter and won his 10th game of the year for California. Earl Stephenson lost the game for Milwaukee when he gave up a two-out pinch single to Winston Llenas that brought in Syd O'Brien from second base.

Graybeard First To Finish Yacht Race

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

LOS ANGELES — The Vancouver, B.C., ketch Graybeard was the first to finish in the TransPacific Yacht Race to Tahiti Wednesday, when she sailed into the harbor here Wednesday with a crossing of 20 days, 11 minutes and 43 seconds from Los Angeles.

Meanwhile, the Portland, Ore., yawl Min Sette was nearing Papeete Harbor today and second place in elapsed time in the Race to Tahiti.

But as the scratch boat in the race, Graybeard could end as far down as fourth in the seven competing yachts when the handicap standings finally are computed.

Min Sette had a handicap of one day and 16 hours and was 261 miles out when Graybeard finished the race.

The French Contender, Pen Duick III, was 275 miles behind Graybeard but had an allowance of two days, 18 hours and was the handicap leader. Aries and Concerto were battling for fourth in the overall standings with Siete and Inisfail bringing up the rear.

Tennis

BRETTON WOODS, N.H. — Tiburon's Bob Lutz, who enjoys tennis doubles action, may not have felt that way yesterday after he and partner Arthur Ashe played the Australian team of Fred Stolle and John Alexander.

The Marinite and his cohort Ashe bowed 7-6, 3-6, 6-1 to the fine Australian team.

In other first round matches, Ismail El Shafei of the United Arab Republic defeated Fred Stolle of Australia, 3-6, 6-0, 6-3; John Alexander of Australia downed Mark Cox of Great Britain, 6-3, 6-3; top-seeded Rod Laver turned back Gerald Battrick of England, 6-4, 6-4, and Bob Carmichael beat Marty Riessen 6-3, 4-6, 9-7.

In second round matches on the first day of the tournament, second-seeded Okker defeated Ray Ruffels of Australia, 6-2, 6-3, and Jeff Borowiak of the U.S. beat Charles Pasarell of Puerto Rico, 6-3, 6-2.

Hockey

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — The New England Whalers of the World Hockey Association have signed former California Seal Tommy Williams and New York Ranger defenseman Jim Dorey to a multi-year contract.

Williams, who spent the last season with the Boston Braves of the American Hockey League, was sent down to Boston last season where he scored eight times and had 15 assists.

Golf

LONDON — Jack Nicklaus was tabbed a 9-4 favorite by Bookmakers to win the British Open Golf Championship starting at Muirfield, Scotland, Wednesday. The bookies also are offering odds of 10-1 that he will complete the golf grand slam.

NEW YORK — David Graham had that heady feeling Wednesday as vaulted 58 rungs in the Professional Golf Association money standings to 31st place with earnings of $43,354, including the $30,000 first prize money in last Weekend's Cleveland Open.

Jack Nicklaus, who tries for the third leg in a grand slam attempt at the British Open next week, leads the pack with $186,051. Lee Trevino is second with $126,072 and Jerry Heard is third with $114,528.

Baseball

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — If all goes very well, Tony Oliva, the American League's defending batting champion, may be back in the Minnesota Twins lineup by September.

The Twins outfielder underwent another operation on his ailing right knee Wednesday. Dr. Harvey O'Phelan, the Twins team physician who performed the operation, said Oliva would be hospitalized about 10 days. The prognosis for Oliva's recovery was "guarded" but a Twins spokesman said the outfielder may be back in the lineup by September.

Boxing

RIVERSIDE — The mother of boxers Jerry and Mike Quarry escaped with four others Wednesday when a propane line on their motor home ruptured and engulfed the vehicle in flames.

The California Highway Patrol said the gas stove line beneath the motor home chassis apparently snapped when the rear tire blew. Sparks touched off the fire.

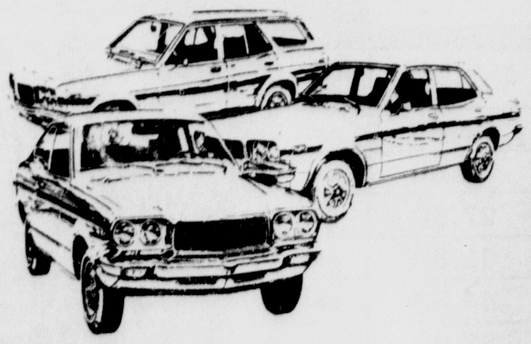

Mrs. Arwanda Quarry, 46, swerved across three lanes of the Artesia Freeway and she and the others — including a young son — leaped out of the van moments before it was destroyed by fire.

Mrs. Quarry was returning to her Southern California home after spending a week in Las Vegas, Nev., where her two boxing sons fought and lost their bouts last Tuesday.

150 Golfers Start Canadian Open Meet

FORT ERIE, Ont. (UPI) —A field of 150 golfers, including all but six of the sports' leading money winners, were to tackle a rain-drenched course today in the first round of the 62nd annual Canadian Open golf tournament at the Cherry Hill golf course here.

Record crowds were expected for the $150,000 tourney, as Lee Trevino began defense of the Canadian title he captured a year ago.

Other top golfing names vying for the $30,000 top prize are Arnold Palmer, Gary Player, ageless Sam Snead, and Jim Jamieson.

The field will narrow down to 70 after Friday's second round, with the third and fourth rounds slated for Saturday and Sunday.

Heavy rains in recent days have caused a constant problem at the 6,750-yard course, and practice rounds have been cut short by steady rains.

During the past five days, many of the 119 traps on the course have been filled with water. "We've been pumping them out for the last two days," club greens superintendent Charles Behm, Jr., said. "We'll need another couple of days with sun and wind to get them back in shape."

Trevino completed his first full practice round Tuesday and said the course seemed tougher than when he played it last month. "I played this course last month and it didn't seem as tough" the colorful Trevino said.

U.S. Open winner Jack Nicklaus will skip the Canadian Open in preparation for the upcoming British Open.

TENNIS

Smith was in his stride, nudging a very confident overhead backhand to take the set 6-1 and put his signature firmly on the match.

Smith's heavyweight blows plus the nimble Czechoslovak's judgment and sweet volleying touch made the tennis interesting but far from vintage stuff that the fans look for in a Wimbledon semifinal.

Stan held firm against everything that Kodes could offer but lost a break point at deuce in the seventh game as Kodes jabbed a neat forehand volley across court to save.

KILLING

After 14 games had gone with service in the third and fourth sets, Smith got the killing service break in the 11th game of the courth. He went to break point 30-40 when Kodes made a rare volley error at the net and Stan hit a backhand down the line to take the service and lead 6-5.

Rippling with confidence Smith ran to 40-0 and to allow himself three match points.

Stan gave the crowd an ironic laugh by wasting first match point with his fourth doublefault of the match.

But his next service was a scorcher that whipped into the crowd from the wood of Kodes' racket.

After 130 minutes of forceful but still not entirely convincing tennis, Smith's heavy artillery had cleared his path into his second Wimbledon final.

TRACK

and Paul Gibson plus a whole new flock of stars.

Former Olympians haven't had much luck gaining repeat berths and certainly Davenport and Coleman's chances are of the longshot variety at best.

In the 400, old warhorse Evans seems as strong as ever and is a solid candidate to be among the first three when the competition ends on Sunday. The other solid picks are world record holder Smith and Collett with Mathews given a good chance if one of the so-called top three falters.

OLYMPIC BERTHS

Thus far, after a week of continued competition, 36 athletes have nailed down Olympic berths with 32 more spots to be decided before it's all over. Thirty of those places will come from 10 remaining events and the other two may go to a sprinter and a 400 man to complete the 400 and 1,600 meter relay teams.

Wednesday was a day off from competition for the Athletes by many of them worked out at Hayward field while a block away Cliff Buck, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, was holding an informal news conference.

Buck, in answer to a question, said that opening up the Olympics to pros and amateurs alike would spell the end of the movement.

'OPEN OLYMPICS'

"If they open the Olympics to the pros as they did tennis," said the silver-haired Buck, "that will be the end."

Bob Giegengack of Yale, chairman of the USOC's Track and Field Committee and a member of the Amateur Athletic Union as well, said the AAU will keep on trying to pen up the Olympics to athletes who are pros in one sport and amateurs in another.

"The AAU tried to put forth such a proposal at the last meeting of the International Amateur Athletic Federation," said Giegengack, "but was turned down. We'll try again at the next meeting."

TREVINO TALKS GOLF

Pendulum, By Gum!

By LEE TREVINO

I used to watch guys line up putts with a putter dangling in front of their nose, squinting at the hole like One-Eyed Connolly and looking mysterious. It was scary, like it took witchcraft and a plumb bob to sink a six-footer.

It really looked complicated. I figured if my own eyes couldn't tell me the break of a green, there was no way a $2 putter could. I was wrong.

The right eye is dominant in 99 per cent of all golfers. The pendulum system of judging the slope of a green is darn near foolproof, and especially helpful on mountain courses.

Do it this way: Sight a straight line from your ball to the hole, using both eyes. Holding your putter loosely at the top of the shaft, lift it vertically until you see the ball centered on the shaft just above the hosel (neck) of the club.

Okay, now close your left eye (and if the redhead across the green winks back, watch out!). If the hole is to the right of the ball, the putt breaks to the right. If the hole is to the left, give that baby some room to the left on your putt.

BERNICE GERA MOVIE

Doris Day Could Play Leading Role

By PHIL ELDERKIN
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

I think it was Fred Allen, the old radio comedian, who first suggested that baseball hire women umpires. It was Allen's contention that no woman ever thinks a man is safe when he's out!

I wish I could believe that. But after what happened to Mrs. Bernice Gera recently in the New York-Penn League, I have my doubts. After fighting a six-year battle to get into organized baseball as an umpire, Mrs. Gera finally made it.

She was assigned to work the bases in the first game of a doubleheader between Geneva and Auburn. What happened was strictly a case of arsenic and old lace.

With everybody watching her, she blew an obvious call in the fourth inning — then reversed her decision. For a woman umpire, this is like machine-gunning your own life boat.

Anyway, her call brought Auburn Manager Nolan Campbell racing from the dugout with a verbal protest. In fact, it was so verbal it got him thrown out of the game.

The thing which surprises me is that anybody should think that Mrs. Gera is unique. Women have been umpiring men and nations for years. And while they may not be able to influence the weather, they often raise havoc with office vacation schedules.

Like the majority of new Broadway shows, though, Mrs. Gera opened and closed her act with one performance. She resigned right after the game.

But if the movies ever get wind of what happened, it's sure to mean another million dollars for Doris Day. I mean, who else would you get to play Bernice's part?

I can see it all now. Doris arrives on the field in an umpire's uniform which has been tailored by Christian Dior. Her blond hair is tied with a bow in the back. Instead of cleats on her shoes, she's got rhinestone buckles on the top.

It's a sellout crowd. Marlon Brando, who plays the commissioner of baseball, is attending his first game in four years.

Jack Lemmon is the opposing manager who gets so upset with Miss Day that he doesn't marry her until the final reel.

My feeling is that women should stick to golf and tennis and forget baseball. Billy Jean King made over $100,000 on the courts last year and Kathy Whitworth of the LPGA did extremely well with a hot putter.

Sharon Adams also struck a blow for woemn's lib a couple of years ago when she twice soloed the Pacific in boats which would almost fit in a bathtub.

Nothing to it. These were just little 74-day journeys out of sight of land, people and television. Of course there was the small problem of six storms with wind velocities of from 54 to 73 miles per hour. But mostly the weather was good.

Then there was Morganna Roberts, the Balitmore night club dancer, who devised her own quick route to baseball's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y.

Morganna got her exercise by vaulting onto the field during a game, kissing a ballplayer on the cheek and then running off again.

She was five-for-five, including road games, until the Los Angeles police declared her a "fair catch."

Marinites' Week In Minors Slow, Sour

It was a slow, and sour, week for Marin County's baseball stars now playing with minor league teams.

Only two of the five players — John Dolinsek and Russ Dillon — saw action this week, and what they saw they didn't like.

The Player Periscope service reports that Dolinsek's average for the week was .214, dropping his percentage for the year to .231. Playing with the Newport News (Montreal Expo) club in the International League, Dolinsek collected three hits in 14 trips to the plate. One of his safeties, however, was a home run.

Dillon, a pitcher, was involved in only one game, in which he was tagged with the loss of his Richmond (Atlanta Braves) team also of the International League. Dillon's earned-run average for the year is 3.55, and his won-lost record 3-4.

Holiday Magic Hands 1st Loss To Toby's, 5-4

Toby's Truckers were handed their first loss of the season in the Joe DiMaggio baseball league last night as Holiday Magic pushed a run across in the top of the ninth for a 5-4 win.

Holiday's Dave Urquhart slapped a double to score Steve Rohrs with the winning run. Rohrs also had a seventh inning home run.

In other action, Italian Club edged by Villa Builders 1-0 and Bank of Marin took a 9-3 decision from Drake.

The Truckers now have a 3-1 record as does Italian Club after their win.

Lakers' Guard West Is Looking To Future

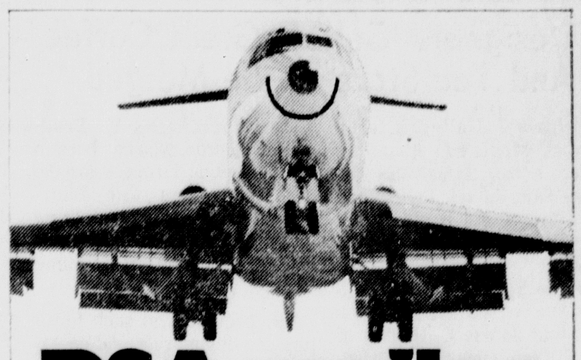

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — Jerry West already has accomplished his goal in the National Basketball Association, but the Los Angeles Lakers' superstar backcourtman is looking forward to a lucrative and perhaps lengthy twilight in his career.

"I have been well paid for a number of years," said the former West Virginia University standout who helped lead the Laker to the NBA championship last year. "I would imagine that I would sign a two-year contract. But the things I will do in the rest of my career will probably be secondary to what I have already done."

NBA Bucks Sign Two Picks: Adams, White

MILWAUKEE (UPI)—George Adams of Gardner-Webb College and Art White, formerly of Georgetown University, have signed with the Milwaukee Bucks, the National Basketball Association club said Wednesday.

Adams, 6-foot 5, was the third-round draft choice of the Bucks after he made the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletic All-America team last year. White, also 6-foot 5, was the Bucks' fourth-round pick. He averaged 29 points per game playing pro ball in Belgium last year.

Designers' Galley, Great Coffee And Tea Store To Be Merged

Designers' Galley kitchen shop at Montecito Shopping Center in San Rafael and The Great San Rafael Coffee and Tea Store at 936 B Street will merge and form a single corporation.

Eugene Schankel of Mill Valley, owner of the coffee and tea shop, and James C. Hughes of San Rafael, owner of Designers' Galley, agreed to the merger. "We did it to increase our buying power and to give our customers the best possible prices," said Schankel.

Both shops will remain open in their present locations, at least through this year. Designers' Galley has been at Montecito Shopping Center for five years, and the Great San Rafael Coffee and Tea Store in downtown San Rafael for four years.

The new corporation has leased the property at 1122 Fourth Street, near the Rafael Theater, where Sears Roebuck catalog sales and appliance office is now located. The corporation will take over that location when Sears moves to its new complex at Northgate Mall at the end of this year. Schankel said he does not know yet what use will be made of the new leased quarters on Fourth Street.

NATURALWOOD DESIGN, a small shop that designs and manufactures furniture, mostly custom work, will open next Monday in San Rafael at 16-B DeLuca Place, near the Bret Harte supermarket.

Owner is Charles W. Penticoff of Tiburon, who has been in the publishing business for the past four years with Little-Brown Co. Furniture-making has been an avocation, which he is converting to full-time work.

He specializes in such furniture as dining sets, coffee tables and barstools.

WASHLAND COIN Laundry in Santa Rosa, owned by Pat Munkres of Nicasio, will open a branch laundromat at the new Park Plaza shopping center in Rohnert Park, at the corner of Rohnert Park Expressway and Commerce Boulevard.

The new Washland Coin Laundry in Rohnert Park will not be ready until about November because construction of the shopping center has only begun.

Munkres had been plant superintendent for Bergman Manufacturing Co. in San Rafael for 28 years until Bergman moved out of state. About a year and a half ago, Munkres opened his first Washland Coin Laundry in Roseland Shopping Center in Santa Rosa, on Sebastopol Road.

"The merger of our dog and cat food divisions isn't working."

Datsun Recalls 62,000 Pickups

CARSON — In an effort to correct what may potentially be a safety related defect, officials of the Nissan Motor Corporation in U.S.A., the Datsun distributors, are recalling approximately 62,000 pickup trucks manufactured between April, 1965 and May, 1969.

While only a single incident has been reported (none in the U.S.), it has been determined that if the accelerator pedal is pressed all the way to the floorboard along with lateral (sideways) pressure, it is possible for the accelerator pedal to lock under the travel stop bolt in a full throttle condition.

In order to assure that this situation does not occur again, all Datsun series 1300, model L520 and L521, manufactured between April, 1965 and May, 1969 will be recalled to replace the travel stop bolt.

W.D. (DICK) OBERHOLTZER of Fairfax has been named an associate of William Baker Advertising in San Francisco. William Baker, head of the year-old agency, is a San Rafael resident.

Oberholtzer's special responsibilities in the agency will include consultation and supervision on all business and financial accounts, both existing and new. He recently retired as Northern California manager of Manufacturers Life Insurance Co.

PICKING STOCKS — A new paperback called "How to Chart Your Way to Stock Market Profits" will be published July 31 by Arco Publishing Co. Inc., 219 Park Avenue South, New York, 10003. Price is $5.95.

Author David L. Markstein has devised a new system for predicting short and medium-term market changes. The publisher says Markstein's system can predict when a growth stock is about to go up or down, and at what point profit-taking is most advisable.

THE LAW FIRM of Riede & Elliott in the Albert Building in San Rafael has been expanded to Riede, Elliott, Brekhus & Riede.

Peter B. Brekhus and Richard S. Riede, who had been associated with Harold F. Riede and Robert W. Elliott, are now full partners in the law firm. Richard Riede is the son of Harold Riede. Their offices are at 418 Albert Building, 1010 B Street, San Rafael.

JOHN D. EKBERG of San Rafael has been named assistant vice president of Western Travelers Life Insurance Co. of San Rafael.

Ekberg joined Western Travelers as manager of the underwriting and policy issue departments in May 1971. He previously was with American Pacific Life Insurance Co.

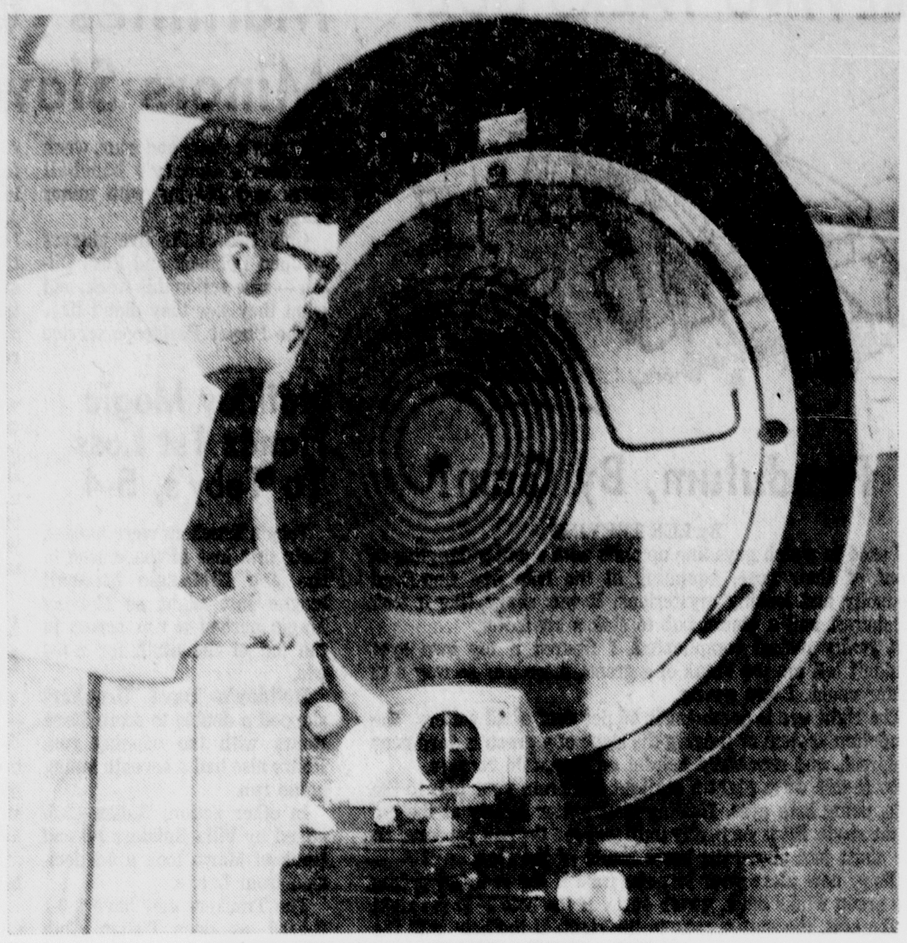

Western Travelers is an associated company of Putnam Financial Services Inc.

ALLEN W. SANBORN of Tiburon has been appointed assistant vice president in the national division at Bank of America's San Francisco headquarters. He joins Bank of America after three years with First National City Bank in New York.

A native of Baltimore, Sanborn holds a master of business administration degree in finance from the University of Pittsburgh.

OIL PAINTINGS by Jean Vaccaro of Fairfax are on display at Ross Valley Savings and Loan Association in San Anselmo. The display will continue through the month of July.

Mrs. Vaccaro is a member of the North Bay Art Association and the Terra Linda Art Association.

THE THERMOSTATIC COIL

A spiral thermostatic metal coil used to regulate automatic chokes on car engine carburetors is checked out on an optical projector by a W.M. Chace Co. technician in Detroit. When the engine is cold, the coil permits a richer mixture of fuel and air to enter the carburetor. As engine temperature rises, the coil rotates, producing a leaner mixture. (UPI Telephoto)

Blue-Jeans Makers Really Have It Nice

NEW YORK (UPI)—The growing trend to more casual attire and the seemingly overwhelming desire of the nation's youth to "identify" has lined the pockets of at least one industry with record sales and profits.

The makers of blue jeans never had it so good.

Industry spokesmen report sales figures have doubled and tripled over the past five years and they say it is only the beginning.

As an example, the industry leader, Levi Strauss & Co., reported 1971 sales of $405 million, a 23 per cent increase over the year before. Net earnings increased from $18 to $19 million. By contrast, sales in 1961 amounted to a mere $51 million.

Another big dungaree manufacturer, Blue Bell Inc., reported 1971 sales of $293.8 million about $55 million ahead of 1970. "Since 1965, when the stock went public, sales more than doubled while profits have almost tripled," said a Blue Bell spokesmen.

What brought on such a sales boom? Apparel manufacturers lay it to changing fashion trends and the public's desire to dress more casually. Also, according to Levi Strauss, it was the result of a very wise decision shortly after World War II.

"It was a conscious effort at the end of the war. It was aimed at the result of the baby boom," the Levi spokesman said. "The man who is 40 now was a teen-ager in the 1950s. Now, he is dressing younger."

The blue jean boom has caught on worldwide. Levi Strauss does at least a quarter of its business in the Far East, Russia and Europe. The interest and demand has been explosive.

A spokesman for the Denim Council is so voracious that in some cases blue jeans are being sold on the black market for as much as $20 a pair.

The demand has caused some problems for the cotton industry, although the immediate spinoff is very lucrative indeed. A shortage of cotton has industry officials concerned. In trying to satisfy the need, the country's textile mills are using about 8.1 million bales of cotton a year. Exporters are sending another 3.2 million overseas. Yet only 1.5 million bales were grown in the United States in 1971-72.

According to the Denim Council, the industry as a whole will require about 400 million linear yards of blue denim this year. That comes out roughly to about 227,000 miles of blue jeans.

Improvement Seen For Madison Fund

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. My wife and I own 1,250 shares of Madison Fund. Since April of this year the shares have been selling at a discount from net asset value. We are not dissatisfied with the dividends but are concerned with the future of the fund. Should we convert this to something which will yield a greater cash dividend? — W.W.

A. In the most recent 12 months, dividends of 85 cents a share have been paid including 35½ cents a share from security profits. This provides a 6.1 per cent yield at current market levels, a generous return in view of the fund's appreciation potential.

In the March quarter Madison added 16 issues, primarily high-quality growth stocks. 17 eliminations were in the defensive and high income categories.

The current 15 per cent discount from net asset value at which these shares are trading is a temporary industry abberation as were the trading premiums of 40 per cent and 50 per cent reached during 1969.

Madison's longer-term record of growth is above average, although in the first five months of the current year this level of appreciation has not been maintained. Your commitment in this one issue is rather heavy, thus partial sale on an upturn is advised.

Q. I hold 100 shares of Cramer Electronics (ASE), which dropped drastically recently. I am a senior citizen so this stock is a concern to me. Should I average down?—M.L.

A. I would not favor averaging down since Cramer is not, in my opinion, a suitable investment for a senior citizen who presumably should be more concerned with conservation of capital and income than with growth.

The recent sharp decline in share price reflects the poor earnings reported in the March quarter. Sales rose 63 per cent, due in large part to the acquisition of Electronic Wholesalers, while earnings dropped from 21 cents to 1 cent a share.

Cramer had until 1971 a consistent record of earnings growth. The company's acquisition program should contribute toward profits recovery. Shares should be held but not averaged down.

Price Surge In Market's Early Hours

NEW YORK (UPI) —Prices surged in heavy trading during the first two hours today in reaction to reports Russia and China have urged Hanoi to settle the Vietnam war soon.

Advances dominated declines, 1,040 to 263, among the 1,600 issues crossing the tape. Two-hour turnover totaled more than 9,150,000 shares, sharply higher than Wednesday's pace but not a record.

A report from London quoted informed Communist sources as saying Russia and China independently had urged Hanoi to settle the war without much more delay.

State Department sources in Washington, however, were somewhat skeptical of the report and the market began to level off.

Uniroyal was the most active issue, up 1-8 at 16 7-8 on 191,800 shares, including a block of 176,000 shares at 16 3-4, unchanged.

American Motors was second, up 1-4 at 9 1-4 on 150,000 shares. National Distillers and Chemical was third, up 3-8 at 20 on 125,500 shares.

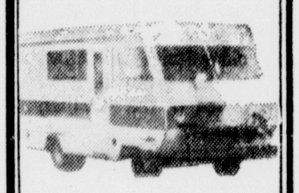

Prices also were higher in active trading on the American Stock Exchange. American Israeli was the most active issue, up 1 1-4 at 17 3-4 on 79,800 shares.

HAMILTON PLANE IN FREAK ACCIDENT

A/1c Frank Pearson stands guard over a F-106 jet which skidded about four blocks off the runway at Hamilton Air Force Base last night. Air Force officials said today the plane's landing gear failed to work, causing the jet to go out of control. However, there was no fire, no explosion and very little damage of other base property in the freak accident, they said. The pilots, Capt. Gary D. Shepard and Lt. William L. Yeager, both of Hamilton, were unharmed.

Space Agency Awards Contract To Study Solar Energy System

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Space Agency announced Thursday a study aimed at supplying the energy-hungry earth with electricity produced by orbiting power satellites.

The satellites, riding in stationary orbits 22,300 miles high, would convert sunlight into electric power and send it to earth by microwave beams for distribution and use.

The idea of tapping solar energy in space to supplement ground power production has been in the discussion stage for some time.

But today the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) took the idea beyond the talking stage by awarding A. D. Little, Inc., Cambridge, Mass., a $197,400 contract for a six-month study of its feasibility.

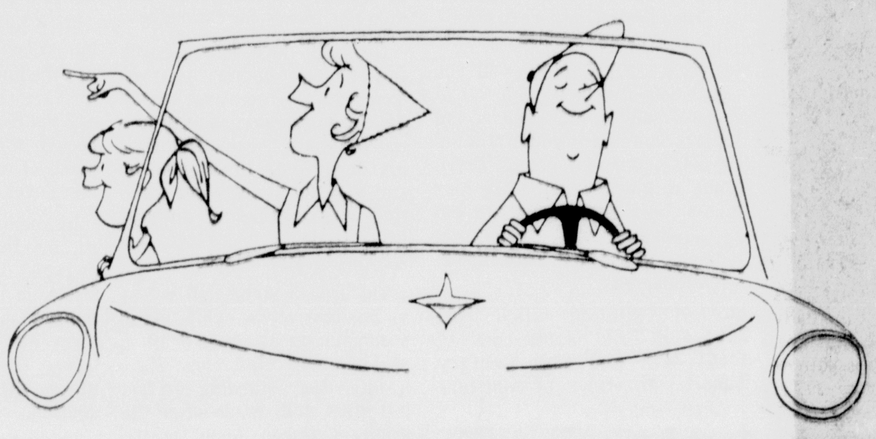

Conversion of sunlight to electricity by means of solar panels has been used for years to supply power to instruments aboard scientific satellites and other spacecraft.

But the power produced by such means is measured in watts. What NASA is looking for now is a way to convert solar energy, gleaned high above the atmosphee, into millions of watts for beaming to earth.

The concept to be explored by A.D. Little would involve the launch of "very large" power plants into fixed orbits from which they supply the earth with a steady and virtually inexhaustible source of nonpolluting energy.

The study will explore among other things ways of managing and controlling "very large structures in space" and how to make the power-from-space system "economically attractive".

Grass Bill Goes To Senate

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Assembly yesterday narrowly passed a bill reducing the penalties for personal possession of marijuana.

Assemblyman Alan Sieroty, D-Beverly Hills, author of the measure, said the present felony penalties for possession of the drug are excessively harsh.

The bill was sent to the Senate on a 41-33 vote, the bare minimum necessary.

The measure would make possession of marijuana a misdemeanor punishable by six months in jail or a fine of $500 or both.

Currently a judge has the discretion to make the first conviction for possession a felony or misdemeanor. For subsequent convictions, it is a mandatory felony.

The penalty under present law for a felony conviction is one to 10 year prison sentence.

Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, D-San Jose, who said two million persons are using the drug, contended the issue was whether it is the "moral right of government to make felons of citizens indiscriminately."

"It is time the government recognized it doesn't always know what's best for the people," he declared.

Several lawmakers said they favored stronger legislation, removing all penalties for personal use of marijuana.

Assemblyman Henry Waxman, D-Los Angeles, said the Assembly should be voting to end entirely the "pointless harassment" of marijuana users.

Sieroty said that currently 83 per cent of persons convicted in the state are given misdemeanor sentences. He said his measure would equalize the application of the law to the remaining 17 per cent.

He also argued that the measure would save courts money by relieving congestion in superior courts. Under his bill, marijuana possession cases would be prosecuted in municipal courts.

He said the Los Angeles Superior Court estimated that it costs the court $3.9 million annually to prosecute marijuana possession cases.

Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, said the legislation was necessary and only a slight step in light of the recommendation by President Nixon's National Commission of Marijuana and Drug Abuse that the personal use of the drug be legalized.

Opposing the bill was Assemblyman Charles Conrad, R-Sherman Oaks, who declared, "in the 26 years I have never seen such hypocrisy."

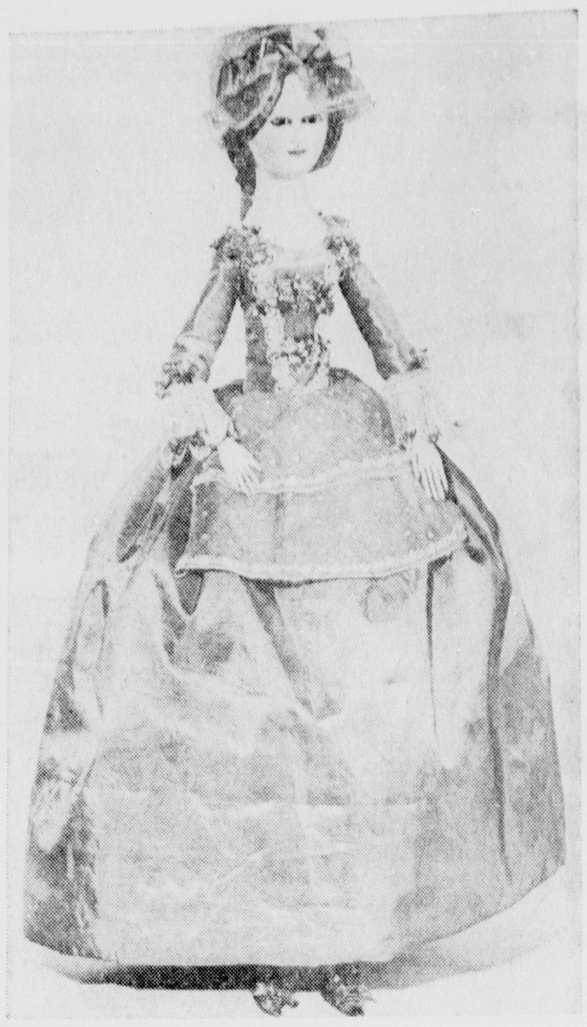

He said the legislature should either decide to maintain the present laws or legalize the drug entirely and regulate its use.

Pigeons Borrowed For Italian Opera

VENICE, Italy (UPI)—St. Mark's Square without pigeons? Unthinkable, says stage director Lauro Rossi.

So he is borrowing 1,000 pigeons from the City of Venice and taking them to Macerata, 140 miles to the south. They are needed for the July 13 opening of the Amilcare Ponchielli opera "La Gioconda," whose first act is set in a cardboard replica of the Venetian square.

New York Show Features Dolls Of Past Centuries

By RICKY ROSENTHAL
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK, N.Y. — If you had bought a paper doll to call your own in 1830 you would most likely have gotten a man-made watercolor cutout. Original watercolor dolls like this have been rescued from a bureau drawer and are now on display at the New York Historical Society.

An exhibition called "200 Years of Toys" features dolls of the 17th and 18th Century placed in settings of miniature Americana.

Mary Black, curator of painting and sculpture and an expert on folk art, said, "Themes like the small stage sets are imaginative ideas associated with the dolls and the period from which they came."

Paraphernalia of the time, including paperweights, Staffordshire China, Jenny Lind memorabilia, textiles, and paintings, help set the smaller-than-life scenes for the dolls.

Girls still love dolls, according to the society's staff. Youngsters prove that every day by responding eagerly to a tour of the museum. Domestic life depicted in times gone by still appeals to the older girls, too, with increasing interest from students in college, according to Mrs. Black.

The Queen Anne doll reigns as mistress of the exhibition in a diaphanous sea-green dress, a real-hair wig, glass eyes. She's a stately lady, standing two feet tall. This doll, made after the reign of Queen Anne, is the earliest and finest in the collection.

Dolls of this type were made in quantity in the southern Alps, northern Italy, southern Germany, and Switzerland. These little ladies of the 17th and 18th Century are wooden, jointed, and gessoed (covered with a thin lifelike plaster used for skin texture).

Dolls in those times served as more than toys. They were used to transmit fashions from place to place. They were dressmakers' samples and were of great beauty with bisque heads and hands of real white kid, emulating gloves.

Inexpensive play is represented by the pennywoodens or pegwood dolls in the collection. Made in Holland, they were simple jointed bodies, with plain heads and sketchy features. Their primitive quality makes them all the more endearing.

These pennywoods are set in a Hawthorne's "House of Seven Gables" atmosphere midst Hepzibah Pynchon's Penny Shop. Pennywoods also grace the decks of a tin "toy" Robert Fulton's steamboat, made by the George Brown Company of Forestville, Conn.
